Why Must We Be Foolish?
Are We Europe's Wet Nurse?
Two Cataleptic Scarecrows.
Observe the Grand League.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

NEWS FROM Washington is puzzling. You are told that we plan to forgive our European debtors, if they will promise to cut down their armaments.

Why do we do that?

First we lent them 10 billion dollars to complete the job of butchering each other. Now we plan to make them a present of the $10,000,000,000, if they will cut down their armaments for future butchery. Can you understand that?

WHAT RIGHT has anybody to saddle 10 billions more on American taxpayers, in order to make European nations kind, gentle and loving toward each other?

Does it make any difference to us how much they arm, or fight, assuming that next time we should have brains enough to keep out of what does not concern us?

DOES ANYONE doubt that money due us, and not paid, would be used in Europe for the very armaments that we seek to discourage?

The best way to discourage European armaments is to make Europe pay what she owes. If she does that, she will have less for big guns and poison gas.

Let us collect our billions from as many of our dear friends as are not "welchers," and use the money to make this nation secure with air fleets, submarines, a full assortment of explosives and gases, such as we should need in case of attack.

THE BUSINESS of the American government is to protect America, not to be wet nurse or dry nurse to Europe. Do you think any European nation is worrying about our welfare?

Why can't we attend to our own business? Do we elect officials to protect Europe?

The truth is, our international financiers stupidly loaded themselves and their customers with foreign bonds, as unsafe as lottery tickets, now dropping in value. High finance wants our foreign debts canceled in order that nationals of foreign governments, with taxes lightened, may have cash to pay private debts in America.

THE PLAN IS to make the people sacrifice 10 billions in debts, that reckless financiers, and fools that bought worthless bonds in Europe, may get back their money.

And in the end they would not get it back. Europe's plan is first to cancel the war debts, then to scale down or wipe out the private debts.

Those that see this column have read many warnings against the purchase of doubtful foreign bonds. Why should the public be taxed to make good such foolishness?

THE COLORADO Psychopathic Hospital is studying a strange case of catalepsy. An unfortunate man stands rigid, hour after hour, his arms outstretched, never moving. He was found in that condition in a cornfield, his hallucination making him believe himself a scarecrow.

Science will deal with him, and perhaps cure him.

But who or what will cure this nation, that assumed a scarecrow attitude in 1929 and still sticks to it?

THAT POOR cataleptic needs only to realize that he is not a scarecrow, and this nation only needs to recover from its fright and realize that the end of the world has not come.

We have everything we ever had, and if we never get back those 10 billions lent to Europe, that won't ruin us. Ten billions represent only 10 per cent of one year's total income in the United States.

We haven't lost our farms, mines, lives, men or money.

What are we whining about? Why can't we go to work, manufacture, buy, sell, employ and accept the invitation of the world to be the world's banker?

England has had her hundred years of world dominance, which began after the battle of Waterloo, and now retires for a rest. The next hundred years should be the greatest that this young nation, possessing everything in the world, but courage, has ever seen.

WHAT DO YOU think of "the League of Nations to end war on earth forever," as you read the news from Japan?

Thirty-two Japanese warships are sent to Chinese ports, and skillful Japanese pilots, dropping explosive bombs, have killed 23 more Chinese, as a further warning.

The Japanese know, as do the other nations, how to make poison gas that would kill 230,000 as easily as 23, and that you will see proved, if real war starts.

THE GRAND League of Nations sits still, holding its breath, saying nothing.

The Japanese say their action is justified because a Japanese officer and two soldiers were killed by Chinese, and perhaps it is justified.

But in any case, it is not our business. We did not kill any Japanese or seize any Chinese city.

Yet, with Britain, Uncle Sam is investigating, meddling, while the League does nothing.

Why does no Uncle Sam attend to his own business? He has enough of it.

HUNT 'KEY MAN' IN MURDERS

Weary of fruitless investigations, homicide detectives admitted today that a man known to them as "Little Joe" Spinelli was the key-man in the racket murders that have eliminated Jack Palmere and Sam "Toto" Amarosa in the struggle for supremacy in the local bootleg supply game.

"Little Joe," detectives say, was the third partner of Palmere and "Toto" in the yeast and sugar racket, and had quarreled with his associates. The disclosure shattered the theory that the killings were the attempt of out-of-town gangsters to cut in on the local trade.

GARAGE MURDER THEORY

Tracing his last movements closely, detectives are now inclined to believe that the murder

Wilkinsburg Burgess Struck With Tomato; Injured Boy Treated at Hospital

Renewal of athletic relations scheduled for today between Wilkinsburg and Westinghouse high schools was preceded by street fights and a riot in front of the Penn-Lincoln Hotel, Wilkinsburg, last night, during which a policeman was hit with over-ripe fruit, a youth was badly hurt and Burgess William M. Turner, of Wilkinsburg, was made the target for an over-ripe tomato.

The marksman who picked out the Burgess as a target aimed accurately and the tomato smeared the countenance of the executive and caused him to retreat into his florist shop at Center and Penn avenues. The injured youth is Charles Krapf, 20, of 906 Wood street, and the policeman who was mussed up is Patrolman John Kelly.

INTENSIFIES RIVALRY

Heated rivalry between Turtle Creek Union and Irwin High School flared into violence in Irwin last night when an automobile truck load of Turtle Creek supporters cruised the streets hurling taunts and overripe fruit at Irwin students. The two teams clash on Irwin's gridiron this afternoon. State highway patrols and Irwin police broke up the melee.

The Wilkinsburg disorder intensified the rivalry between the two high schools whose grid teams were scheduled to meet this afternoon on Graham Field. Wilkinsburg police are preparing to quell any further disturbances which might mar the athletic contest.

Wilkinsburg police state that the trouble was started when a crowd of Westinghouse supporters invaded the borough in a truck, the truck loaded with overripe fruit and vegetables. Small groups of Wilkinsburg residents were made the target for the missiles.

BATTLE STARTS

The ammunition used by the invaders was furnished unwillingly by Wilkinsburg merchants, who ran to the front of their fruit stores in time to see baskets of tomatoes, cabbages, apples, oranges and pears disappear in the possession of young men. Several cases of thefts from fruit shops were reported to police.

When a number of the Westinghouse supporters left the truck in front of the hotel, directly opposite the shop of Burgess Turner, they were surrounded by Wilkinsburg youths who had been following them. The battle followed.

N. J. ASSEMBLY VOTES FOR BEER

TRENTON, N. J., Oct. 10.—(AP.)—The New Jersey Legislature today adopted a joint resolution calling upon Congress to modify the Volstead act to legalize manufacture and sale of light wines and beer.

It was the Legislature's first move for prohibition reform since the Eighteenth Amendment became operative.

Passage of the resolution was made possible by a coalition of Republican and Democratic members.

Republican leaders of both houses caucused many times before the resolution was moved. It was only by construing the Senate rule to mean that a majority was not required on concurrent resolutions that passage was made possible.

The vote in the House was 43 to 7, the latter Republican. The Senate vote was 9 to 5. Four Republican and one Democrat passed the negative Senate vote. A majority of the Senate is 11 votes.

The Rev. James K. Shields, superintendent of the New Jersey Anti-Saloon League, who sought to block the resolution, asserted it would "go down to Washington to help fill dead letter archives."

DISTRICT ATTORNEY'S OFFICE PROBES ALSO; QUESTION BONDS

The opening gun of another Kline administration inquiry was fired this morning when City Controller James P. Kerr authorized auditors of Price, Waterhouse & Co., certified accountants, to make an independent audit of the City Treasurer's books.

At the same time it was revealed that the District Attorney's office had been investigating reports that $125,000 of city funds in the Franklin Savings and Trust Company, which closed several weeks ago, was unsecured, in violation of a city ordinance which requires a bank to post bonds to the value of city deposits.

Treasurer Roy D. Schooley made no objection when several auditors began scrutiny of the records.

Word spread like wildfire through the City-County Building that another department of the Kline regime was under fire.

The same firm of auditors engaged by Kerr also represented him in the audit of the Department of Supplies records in the food purchase investigation, which was followed by indictment of Mayor Charles H. Kline and Supplies Director B. L. Succop.

The District Attorney's investigation, was said to have started soon after the Franklin Savings and Trust Company closing but was interrupted by the grand jury investigation of primary election frauds.

A partial list of closed banks holding city funds was said to be in possession of Controller Kerr today. At the time the banks closed Kerr assumed that all city moneys were amply protected by securities.

Mayor Kline called Controller Kerr on the telephone soon after the news went out that the investigation of the Treasurer's office was on.

Kerr said:

"The Mayor wants to see me."

He went to Kline's office for a conference. Kerr promised a statement later.

All transactions at the Treasurer's office will be investigated.

The City Controller has full authority under the law to make such an audit, his legal advisers informed him. Ordinarily a yearly audit is made by members of the Controller's staff. This was to have been done last January, but was postponed owing to press of business and the Department of Supplies probe.

Controller Kerr declined to make a statement of the purposes of the scrutiny of the Treasurer's records.

Neither was there a statement forthcoming from Schooley.

STORE BANDITS SEIZE $1,000

Forcing Samuel Barbine, of 32 Carver street, a clerk in Harry Gorman's grocery at 916 Highview avenue, East End, to lie face downward on the floor, two armed bandits early today looted a safe in the store and escaped in a stolen automobile with approximately $1,000 in cash and checks.

The bandits, described as being well-dressed, entered the store a few minutes after it had been opened, Barbine said, and asked for cigarets. As Barbine turned to serve them, one of the bandits pushed a gun into his back and compelled him to lie on the floor. The other looted the safe.

While the bandits were in the store a bread delivery wagon approached. Their companion, in a waiting automobile, sounded an alarm and the men fled.

Caught in the office of the Pan-American Life Insurance Company in the Clark Building, Thomas Lewis, 48, of New York, who said he was an insurance and real estate agent, was being held for investigation in Central Police Station. Police said the office had been ransacked. They are trying to link him with other prowling jobs in downtown office buildings.

'Pepper' Signs Baseball For Baby Namesake Here

John (Pepper) Martin, the three-day old son of Mr. and Mrs. James J. Martin, of 1510 Wolpert street, is a lucky young fellow.

In St. Louis, as a mob of fans almost crushed him, and gents were busy getting him to sign for the stage and to write for the newspapers and newspapermen were getting interviews and taking pictures, Pepper Martin, centerfielder of the St. Louis Cardinals, and hero of the world series with the Athletics, stopped long enough yesterday to autograph a baseball for the infant named after him.

Martin was told by Charles J. Doyle, staff correspondent of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, that a picture of his namesake had appearing in yesterday's paper. Pepper beamed:

"Well, now, isn't that fine? Here, give him a little present from me."

Whereupon he called for a new baseball and autographed it and gave it to Doyle, who will bring it back from the series with him.

Rural Jurors Hear Account Of Gang Czar's $5 Hotel Tips; Party Lasted Two Days

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
International News Service.

CHICAGO, Oct. 10. — An intimate and authentic picture of Al Capone's high spending proclivities—both in Chicago, where he maintained his "business" headquarters and in sunny Florida, his winter playground—is being presented by the government at the trial of the gangster chief for evasion of the income tax laws before Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson.

The jurors, most of them men from rural towns and unused to large sums of money, are listening to a flock of witnesses who tell of incidents such as Capone peeling off a $500 bill and tossing it to a hotel clerk to settle an account, of Capone receiving $80,000 in Western Union money orders while he was living in his exotic home on Palm Island, Miami, Fla., and of the $1,600 party "Al" threw in Chicago just before the Dempsey-Tunney "Battle of the Long Count."

Attorneys for the government are bringing out this evidence to show that Capone owed Uncle Sam a substantial amount in income taxes. They have succeeded in getting this testimony before the jury in spite of the vigorous objections from Capone's battery of high-priced lawyers.

Most of the $80,000 Capone received in money orders while he was in Florida in 1928 and early in 1929 was sent from the gang chief's headquarters at the Lexington Hotel in Chicago. The money went to him under the alias of "Albert Costa."

EXTORTIONIST SUSPECT SHOT

Wounded by Trooper in Trap Set After Demand Upon Monessen Mayor

MONESSEN, Pa., Oct. 10. —An extortionist suspect accused by state police of making demands for money on Mayor Carl E. Woodward was near death today in the Charleroi-Monessen Hospital, shot by a state trooper near an abandoned pumping station in Rostraver Township yesterday.

The wounded man has been identified, the troopers say, as Michael Kacik, 36, of Rostraver Street.

Mayor Woodward is a business associate of W. F. Wright, prominent furniture dealer, who last year was the selected victim of an extortionist. Demands made upon Wright resulted in the gun battle in Grandview Cemetery between State Trooper Charles L. Stewart and John Sabo, 21, of Monessen, in which both men were fatally wounded.

Pretending to follow instructions as outlined in a letter signed "Black Hand," Mayor Woodward yesterday placed a decoy package near the abandoned pumping station in sight of State Police Sergt. John J. Tomek and Pvt. George W. Kercher, hidden nearby. Kacik, the police state, was on a nearby hillside and had watched the Mayor's movements through field glasses.

The troopers say they detected Kacik crawling toward the package, but that he caught sight of their uniforms and fled. When their cries for him to halt were ignored, both officers fired. Kacik fell with a bullet wound in his back. Although believed fatally wounded, Kacik has refused to answer questions.

State police learned Kacik is a former mill worker. They reported uncovering Communistic literature in his home.

Returning Board to Certify Election Totals; Park Goes to Canada For Rest

The Returning Board was to certify totals today in the most hectic primary election of recent years, which resulted in 44 fraud indictments and the political fade-out of County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong, defeated for renomination.

With District Attorney Andrew T. Park in Canada for a week's rest following his arduous labors directing the September grand jury's election probe, a lull was expected in the investigation of alleged vote cheating.

On Park's return, the October grand jury will take up an investigation of irregularities in the purchases of tax receipts in wholesale lots by minor politicians and the registration of "phantom voters."

POST BOND

George J. Schad, chairman of the Board for Assessment and Revision of Taxes, and three of five others indicted yesterday on charges of conspiracy to pad assessment lists of the First Ward with phantoms, were at liberty in $1,000 bond today, pending trial in Criminal Court.

The others who posted bond were Paul J. Walsh, Republican nominee for constable of the First Ward, whose father, Police Supt. Peter P. Walsh, went his security; Samuel Ramsey, tax board employe, and District Fire Chief Saul Klein.

Others indicted in the First Ward case were Charles J. McBride, secretary of the Tax Board, reported ill at his home, and Frank Alpert, a subordinate assessor. They and 20 members of three election boards—Second District, Fifth Ward; Sixteenth District, Nineteenth Ward, and Fourth District, Wilmerding, were to have until Monday to provide bail.

The complete count by the Return Board showed County Commissioner C. C. McGovern leading Armstrong by 1,789 votes. Two districts, the First of Forward Township, and the Fourth of Wilmerding, both giving Armstrong big pluralities, were thrown out by Judges Elder W. Marshall and George V. Moore, of the Return Board. Had these districts been counted, McGovern's lead would have been 536.

STADTFELD WITHDRAWS

Judge Joseph Stadtfeld, edged out for one of the seven Republican nominations for Common Pleas Court Judge, requested the County Commissioners to withdraw his name from the Democratic and Liberal tickets on which he was nominated.

Justice James B. Drew, of the Supreme Court, was given a lead of 7,064 votes in Allegheny County over Charles P. Uhl.

While the official count was awaited from Luzerne County, the unofficial vote from that county showed Drew required a 5,200 majority here to win the nomination. The Allegheny County official vote was: Drew, 9,080; Uhl, 2,016.

Eight persons were held for court charged with election law violations in the First and Second districts of the Second Ward, McKees Rocks, by Alderman Louis C. Wicks, of Oakland, yesterday.

Decision was reserved in the case of Justice of the Peace James J. Westwood, arraigned on a similar charge. Those held were George Panyko, Andrew Henick, Patrolman Victor Jadinak, Alex Jadinak, Michael Macinko, Saul Roth, Mike Lagosh and Special Patrolman George Matovich.

Meetings were to be held by bankers in St. Louis, Chicago and other cities today to consider plans for joining the pool which is to aid the country's banks.

Names of the 12 directors of the corporation were expected to be announced today. Mortimer N. Buckner, chairman of the organization committee, composed of leading New York bankers, reported. Most of them, he said, had been selected, although a few have not as yet responded to the invitation to serve.

Such rapid progress has been made, Buckner stated, that the first meeting of directors may be held Tuesday.

HUNT 'KEY MAN' IN MURDERS

of "Toto" was committed in the garage in the rear of the Church street, Turtle Creek, residence where the murdered man was known to have spent his last night.

"Toto" was known to have left the Church street residence with Spinelli early Wednesday morning, a few hours before his flame-enveloped body was found in a gasoline-soaked blanket in Peterson's Hollow, Patton Township.

Alphonse, 17, and Leonard Cicerone, 21, occupants of the residence in Church street, had identified a picture of Spinelli at the city Detective Bureau as the man who had taken "Toto" from their home a few hours before his body was found.

CLUE TO NOOSE

Homicide detectives have a theory that "Toto" was strangled in the garage in the rear of the Church street address, and that his body was then removed to the ravine where an attempt was made to burn it.

Searching the garage in the rear of the Church street home early today, detectives say they found rope similar to the piece that they believe choked the life from "Toto." In the attic of the residence they uncovered a large booze plant. Stills were installed in many homes by Amarosa, Palmere and Spinelli, detectives say. Rent was free to those who would permit stills to be operated in their residences, detectives say.

MOTIVE UNEXPLAINED

Although they say that Spinelli was the third partner in the racket, detectives were not able to explain why his anger attained murder pitch. They know, they say, of a quarrel.

Eliminating the "out-of-town" and other theories, detectives now say that "Toto" went to Turtle Creek to find a sanctuary after learning of Palmere's death. Spinelli, the third partner, they say, knew of the hideout and found "Toto."

HEIRESS BRIDE FOUND DRUGGED

CHICAGO, Oct. 10.—(INS.)—Police today sought the source of a mysterious potion which was believed to have overcome Mrs. Florence O'Shea Foley, 34-year-old heiress. She was in a deep coma when found by an attendant in her apartment.

Brought to the police station for questioning, her 17-year-old husband, Chris Foley, was able to shed little light on the mystery, authorities said. He told police he and Mrs. Foley have been living apart as the result of a quarrel. Police said her physician had informed them he had administered a sedative to the woman.

Mrs. Foley inherited $500,000 a few years ago. Last September she was married to her youthful suitor.

STIMSON FEARS WAR IN CHINA

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—(INS.)—Secretary of State Stimson today was seeking a means of bringing pressure to bear on the Japanese government to end hostilities in South Manchuria, and at the same time to avoid embarrassing the government of Premier Wakatsuki at Tokio in its efforts to suppress the military party. Stimson has grave doubt that war can be avoided, it was learned.

It was practically certain some affirmative action would be taken by Stimson once he was sure of the extent Japanese troops have disregarded their rights under treaty to guard the South Manchurian Railroad, as well as Japanese residents in the trouble area.

Students Fight Suspension Of Professor for Book

BATON ROUGE, Ala., Oct. 10—(AP.)—Louisianna State University students were circulating a petition opposing suspension of Dr. John Earle Uhler as professor of English, which occurred yesterday as the sequel to a criticism by a Catholic priest on the professor's book, "Cane Juice."

The petition asserted the book was not a reflection on the L. S. U. co-eds, nor was it improper as charged by the Rt. Rev. F. J. Gassler, of St. Joseph's Catholic Church here. The petition affirmed a high regard for Dr. Uhler by the students.

Dr. Uhler also received a telegram from H. H. Howland, of New York, that the American Civil Liberties Union was interested in his case, while Mrs. Malcolm W. Lockhart, wife of the rector of St. James' Episcopal Church, of Baton Rouge, published a defense of "Cane Juice," saying it was a book "with an ideal and a purpose."

University co-eds tonight circulated a petition of their own denying the book was any reflection on them.

'False Idol,' Says Gandhi As Own Image Crashes

LONDON, Oct. 10.—(AP.)—An heroic statue of Mahatma Gandhi in clay was upset accidentally at the house where the Mahatma is staying, and it crashed to the floor in a thousand pieces. He commented:

"Being of mud, it was a false idol and seemed doomed to fall."

He told Jo Davidson, the sculptor:

"It is distressing to see one's head dashed to pieces, but I am sure you can put even a mad man like me together again."

The work will be done over.

NEW COUNTY BOARD MAY CHANGE TOWN HALL LOCATION

SCHENLEY SITE IMPERILED BY LEGAL TANGLE

Supreme Court Ruling On Pending Appeal May Be Delayed Until March

The erection of a Town Hall is expected to be acted upon eventually by the new Board of County Commissioners, with the changes of zoning laws to be passed upon by a new City Council, as the result of the lapse of time since the decision by the present County Commissioners to place the building on the Nicola site in Schenley Farms.

The appeal from the decision of Judge James R. Macfarlane in Common Pleas Court, upholding the action of the County Commissioners, was filed in the Supreme Court yesterday by Attorney Oliver K. Eaton, on behalf of a score of Schenley Farms property owners and institutions.

It is considered unlikely that the appeal may be placed on the list in time to be argued at the November session of the Supreme Court in November or that it will be advanced in time. The appeal was filed after the time for appeal had almost expired.

It is therefore considered likely the appeal will be heard at the January session in Philadelphia and in the ordinary course a decision would not be handed down until the court reconvenes in March.

Meanwhile, the Board of County Commissioners will have changed and if Judge Macfarlane's decision is reversed the project will come anew before the board.

EDISON HOLDS DIM SPARK OF LIFE

'Wizard' May Linger Weeks, Physician Says, But Awaits Emergency Call

International News Service.

WEST ORANGE, N. J., Oct. 10.—The light of life continued to dim today for Thomas A. Edison, electrical wizard.

He had passed a comparatively peaceful night, but all yesterday he had been in a stupor from which it was difficult to rouse him, Dr. Hubert S. Howe announced.

Uremic poisoning, complicated by other disorders, left the aged inventor weak. Dr. Howe said his patient might linger for weeks, although an emergency call at any time would not surprise him.

Rocco Salomine today treasured the memory of the smile with which the sinking genius greeted him yesterday. Salomine is Edison's barber, and yesterday he shaved his famous customer for perhaps the last time.

The man of whose condition President Hoover and the Pope, as well as industrial magnates, are being frequently advised, rallied sufficiently to be lifted from his bed to a chair and be shaved by Salomine. And the famous scientist, recognizing him, smiled at Salomine.

Freight Train Kills Vestaburg Man

BROWNSVILLE, Pa., Oct. 10.—Thomas Varnara, 55, of Vestaburg, was killed when struck by a freight train near Fredericktown.

Rector Defies Bishop Brown Ouster Order

COLUMBIA, Pa., Oct. 10.—(AP.)—The Rev. Guy E. Caruthers today said he did not intend to obey the order of the diocesan bishop, the Rev. Wyatt Brown, of Harrisburg, that his relation with St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal Church here "be terminated as of November 1."

Mr. Caruthers said he had the support of his vestrymen and all his congregation and that "there is no authority in the Episcopal Church to reverse their judgment."

He said:

"The parish is a unit in itself."

The board of vestrymen which supported the Rev. Caruthers was elected September 16. The previous board claimed the new if legally elected, saying vestrymen could be elected only the Monday after Easter. Mr. Caruthers then brought against the old board criminal charges of "conspiracy to falsely bring criminal charges" against the new board.

Members of the old board were arrested and posted $300 bond each for appearance at a hearing scheduled to have been held yesterday, but postponed until October 28.

After the minister brought the charges against the old board Bishop Brown ordered the Rev. Caruthers to leave the parish November 1.

NEW $500,000 HOARD TAKEN FROM WOMAN

Nurse Finds Fifty $10,000 Bills in Pocket of Skirt Of 93-Year-Old Widow

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—(AP.)—The discovery of an additional $500,000 in currency in a hidden pocket in her skirt yesterday brought Mrs. Ida Mayfield Wood's hoard of cash and securities to near the $1,000,000 mark.

A nurse, observing the 93-year-old woman furtively counting money, waited until she dozed and then extracted a canvas bag from her skirt. In it were 10 packages, each containing five $10,000 bills.

Earlier in the week authorities found about $400,000 in currency and securities in Mrs. Wood's Herald Square hotel room. It had been stuck away in trunks which contained her faded finery.

But it had not been determined whether this $900,000 represents the total wealth of the widow of Benjamin Wood, once owner of a long defunct newspaper called the New York Daily News. Fourteen trunks in a storage warehouse are yet to be examined.

The nurse reported to Otis F. Wood, the aged woman's recently appointed guardian and nephew of her husband, that she had seen Mrs. Wood put something inside the waist of her dress. Wood suggested the nurse wait until her charge went to sleep and then investigate.

Before Mrs. Wood discovers the substitution, her nephew hopes he and his brothers will have won her confidence.

B. & L. LEAGUE URGES TAX CUT

The demand for lower city and county taxes has been approved by the Allegheny County League of Building and Loan Associations, who voted last night to send their officers to attend the budget sessions of City Council and the County Commissioners.

John A. Sharp, past president of the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board, spoke to the building and loan men on the necessity of economy in spending public funds. The motion to protest high taxes carried unanimously.

The Real Estate Board has been studying the tax situation for several years, and, through its secretary, J. Roland Brady, has been keeping in close touch with city affairs. Suggestions have already been made by the realtors to Council regarding the operation of the market houses and the City-County Building which offer the possibility of substantial savings. Other sections of the city budget are being scanned by the real estate men at present, it is reported.

Two of the present teachers at the school, who have taught in the old building for long periods, were present. They are Miss Sarah J. Maryin, a teacher for 39 years, and Miss Lyde Highberger, a teacher for 25 years.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 10.—(AP.)—A mistrial was declared in Quarter Sessions Court yesterday after a county detective had talked with a juror, Ralph Robinson, 34, was on trial on charges of manufacture and distribution of $10,000 worth of aspirin under false labels.

The detective, Anthony J. Waldron, was not charged with the jury tampering but was censured by the court for "very unwise" action.

The remark to the juror, who had left the jury box with a tipstaff for a glass of water, was:

"Do you want an aspirin?"

Legislator Protests Strike Breaking Aid

BOSTON, Oct. 10.—(AP.)—A state representative has charged that the state government was lending itself to the purpose of destroying the International Longshoremen's Association in Boston.

Representative William P. Prendergast, himself a member of the association, filed in the House of Representatives an order calling upon the Department of Public Works to explain "why Commonwealth Pier, a state-owned property, is being used to house and feed strikebreakers." Approximately 3,000 longshoremen are on strike.

PARTY SPOILED BY DRY RAID

While half a dozen couples danced merrily at the fag end of a long evening, prohibition agents swooped down upon an alleged cabaret and bar at 1423 Reedsdale street, seized, they reported, 28 pints of whisky, three gallons of alcohol, two barrels of beer and a small quantity of gin. They made one arrest, holding William Scanlon, 24, of 1572 Oakdale street, for a hearing on a charge of possession before a United States Commissioner.

A 50-gallon still, 14 barrels of mash and 10 gallons of moonshine was confiscated in a raid at 1102 Warlo street. No arrests were made.

BELIEVE BODIES OCEAN FLIERS'

HULL, Mass., Oct. 10.—(AP.)—Two bodies were washed ashore aboard a life raft at Nantasket Beach last night.

Medical Examiner John G. Sweeney, of Michigan, said there was a possibility that one body was that of a woman, and he would make an examination today.

Dr. Sweeney said both bodies had been in the water for many months and that he feared there would be no means of identifying them.

Authorities said there was a belief that the bodies might be those of Mrs. Frances W. Grayson and one of her companions who attempted a trans-Atlantic flight from Old Orchard, Me., over a year ago.

Body of Bremen Mail Plane Pilot Found

PARRSBORO, Nova Scotia, Oct. 10.—(AP.)—The body of Fritz Simon, pilot of the liner Bremen's mail plane which crashed in Cobequid Bay early Tuesday morning, was found yesterday.

Lieut. Louis Leigh, who sighted the body, said he believed Simon had been alive until yesterday. Buoyed up by his life-belt, Simon was upright in the water. In his hand he held a monocle.

Simon and Rudolph Wogenknecht were attempting to fly trans-Atlantic mails from the Bremen in mid-ocean to New York.

MILFORD, Pa., Oct. 10.—(AP.)—Mrs. Walter Archbold, wife of the missing rector of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the Good Shepherd, received a telegram saying her husband was ill in San Francisco. The message, signed by Mr. Archbold, said he was "mentally and physically sick."

His wife left at once for California. Mr. Archbold has been missing since August 11, when he left for a vacation trip to Nova Scotia.

$25,000 Estate of Cat To Be Auctioned Off

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 10.—(AP.)—The $25,000 estate of the late Mitzi, the world's wealthiest cat, will be auctioned off next Monday in suburban San Gabriel.

When Mitzi died intestate, last April, she left not only a home and household furnishings valued at $10,000 but a fund of $15,000 as well.

The property and money were willed to Mitzi by her mistress, Dr. Maude Cain, who died in October, 1930. The money was placed in trust for the cat's upkeep, and the home was left to shelter the blue Angora until her death.

Proceeds from liquidation of the estate will go, under the will, to the administratrix.

Before Dr. Cain died she had special runways built for Mitzi so the cat could enter and leave the home at her whim. After the physician's death, Mitzi lingered on, dying of what cat lovers termed a broken heart. An autopsy showed it was at least a physical heart ailment, for Mitzi was 18 years old.

Seven men were held today by McKees Rocks police after they are alleged to have passed cards throughout the borough purporting to have been issued by the Roxian Theater, Chartiers avenue, in which patrons were notified that the first floor was reserved for American-born patrons, while those of foreign birth would be asked to sit in the balcony.

The men, two of them said to be striking union motion picture operators, were arrested on complaint of the theater management, who declared passing of the cards part of a strikers' plot. MUSICIAN FREE, DEATH NEAR

SAN QUENTIN, Cal., Oct. 10.—(AP.)—Damascus Gallur, famous musician, sentenced to life imprisonment for murder, was released on parole from San Quentin Prison to spend the remainder of his days in his native Spain. Those days, physicians say, are numbered, as he is 57 years old and suffering from paralysis.

Gallur was received at the prison from Oakland in 1915 after he had been convicted of slaying an elderly money lender. In August, 1929, he was paroled, because of ill health, to go to Los Angeles. At his own request he was permitted to re-enter prison on January 24, this year, to receive treatment.

For 13 years Gallur led the prison band. He is a graduate of a Spanish conservatory of music and once was a soloist in Sousa's band, he says. Relatives in Barcelona, Spain, will pay his passage and care for him.

Hawks, Confused by Fog, 'Lost' for Hours on Hop

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Oct. 10.—(AP.)—Capt. Frank Hawks arrived at Charlotte airport late yesterday after being "lost" for hours in a fog and rain storm.

The flier said he "got turned around" at South Boston, Va., on his way from New York and found himself back at Richmond — his previous stopping place. He admitted to reporters:

"I've been doing quite a bit of cross-country flying, you know," and I thought I could fly straight. Well, I found out I can. I flew straight toward you and straight away from you."

After losing much time on his "round trip" between Richmond and South Boston, Capt. Hawks proceeded to set what he believes to be a new record from Richmond to Charlotte, flying it in an hour and 10 minutes.

Hawks had planned to proceed to Kansas City, but because of his late arrival, he said he would remain here today, taking off for Springfield, Mass.

Capt. Hawks will take part in the all-southern air pagenat here.

TAMPA, WAGNER ADOPTED BY KOMIC CLUB

Youngsters Make Magician And Former Baseball Star Members After Meetings

It is estimated that no less than 20,000 boys and girls were today enrolled in the newly organized Warner Theater-Sun-Telegraph Junior Komic Club. Chapter meetings were held in 13 Warner Theaters and an independent chapter was launched at the Mt. Oliver-Harris Theater.

At all of these meetings new membership cards and club buttons were issued. And didn't those youngsters smile all over as they signed their names on the cards and pinned the nifty buttons on their coats. Yes, they are now members of what will undoubtedly be the largest and most interesting boys' and girls' club in America—a club that stands for honesty, fair play and wholesome clean entertainment at their chapter meetings.

TWO NEW CHAPTERS

Two new chapters were organized in Warner Theaters today—one at the Enright in East Liberty and another at the downtown Harris Theater. Out at the Enright, Hans Wagner, the veteran ball player, was a guest of the youngsters and they immediately admitted him as an honorary member of the Enright Chapter.

Tampa, the magician, by courtesy of the Hankey Baking Company, was a special guest at the Harris Theater Chapter, and for this honor Tampa was also made an honorary member of the Harris Chapter. And Tampa gave those youngsters a big show of magic—had them laughing, roaring and guessing for nearly an hour.

REAL FUN BEGINS

Now that the work of organization is under way the real activities of the various chapters will begin. There are to be new officers elected and the new presiding officers will be known as the Grand Jesters. In the meantime special entertainment and shows are being prepared for the youngsters—there'll be something exciting doing every Saturday.

Boys and girls in the reading area of the Sun-Telegraph who want to join the Sun-Telegraph Junior Komic Club are urged to send in the application blank on this page right away. In a day or two they will get membership cards and club buttons and will be assigned to membership in a chapter near their neighborhood.

Don't wait! Join today! Be one of 50,000 members before the special Christmas parties.

Head of Schismatic Church Repents, Dies

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 10.—(AP.)—Repentant and forgiven by the Roman Catholic Church, Joaquin de Jesus Perez, former patriarch of the schismatic Mexican Catholic Church, died yesterday at the age of 81.

INSURANCE MEN ELECT LAIRD

John M. Laird, vice president of the Connecticut General Life Insurance Company, was elected president of the American Life convention in its closing session yesterday at the William Penn Hotel.

Col. Charles B. Robbins, of Cedar Rapids, Ia., retiring president, was elected to the executive committee for a two-year term. Other members of the committee were re-elected with the exception of Clarence L. Ayres, of Detroit, whose place was filled by Walter E. Webb, of Chicago.

The convention failed to take any drastic action regarding the disability clause in life insurance policies which has recently been removed from the contract of several companies because of the heavy losses involved. The convention accepted a report of the disability committee which said experience was lacking to warrant a statement as to whether or not the clause can be handled profitably. It warns that no company can afford to ignore the danger signals which have arisen.

Invitations to the convention for next year were received from Havana, Montreal, Detroit and Washington. They have been referred to the executive committee.

Twenty fellow workers rescued the men, trapped in a manway when a shot of dynamite they fired to loosen coal dislodged a huge boulder. The stone blocked the passageway.

Mr. Curtis Shows Just What a Vice President Can Do

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

Busy days at the White House. Reception room is crowded with bankers and garage is full of plans.

The kitchen cabinet is meeting in the barn. They've just put over one of those billion-dollar ideas. It's tremendous. So big that the dollar mark is five feet away from the decimal point.

And where do you think the Vice President is when all this history mixing is going on? He's out picking hickory nuts with the Boy Scouts.

Yes, sir, Mr. Curtis knew something was going to happen when he noticed that Mr. Hoover wasn't shaking hands with the distinguished visitors. They were in earnest this time.

We will have to wait a couple weeks before we discover whether Mr. Hoover or Mr. Curtis showed the best judgment.

When a banker visits the White House he ain't there to roll eggs on the lawn. And the absence of handshaking indicates the boys know each other too well for that.

STRIKE ENDED, LEWIS WINS

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Oct. 10.—(AP.)—The Glen Alden Coal Company general grievance committee last night rescinded the strike call which has crippled 22 Glen Alden Coal Company mines since the middle of September. More than 20,000 miners will return to the various operations on Monday morning.

Revocation of the strike call was a victory for John L. Lewis, international president of the United Mine Workers of America, and Philip J. Murray, international vice president.

Under the terms of the agreement President Lewis will appoint an international commission to sit with officials of District 1, United Mine Workers of America, until grievances which resulted in the calling of the strike are adjusted.

W.C.T.U. SHOWS MEMBER GAIN

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Oct. 10.—(AP.)—A gain of 4,462 members and 3,708 honorary male members during the year was reported at the state convention of the Women's Christian Temperance Union. Two hundred and eighty delegates were registered for the opening meeting and 50 more were expected.

Mrs. Gifford Pinchot canceled an engagement to speak last night but was expected here today. Commander John D. Pennington, prohibition administrator, was here, accompanied by his wife, but he was not listed among the speakers.

Mrs. Ella B. Black, Beaverdale, the state president, presided.

Chilean Official Uses Old Law to Ban Bullfights

SANTIAGO, Chile, Oct. 10.—(AP.)—Minister of Interior Marcial Mora has put his foot down on bullfighting in Chile.

He gave orders to Provincial Gov. Bustamante canceling plans for bullfights as part of the Columbus Day celebration. He invoked an 1827 law to do it, declaring the statute still was effective.

Police Clerks Told To Tone Down Ties

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—(AP.)—The rainbow has been banished from the police department. Dazzled by the polychrome effect produced by neckties worn by members of the clerical force, Commissioner Mulrooney issued an order that henceforth the regulation prescriptive plain black for ties must be observed.

PHILA. SHORT OF CITY FUNDS

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 10.—(AP.)—The Philadelphia Record says the municipal government of Philadelphia is without funds to meet its current bills. Grocers who presented bills for food for the poor yesterday were unable to receive payment, the daily says.

Controller Willis Hadley is quoted as saying the city borrowed $750,000 to meet October 1 payrolls and would have to borrow a like amount for October 15. Bills for the remainder of the year are expected to be met by floating of a long-term loan October 26.

Mayor Mackey proposed a 1932 budget containing drastic economic reductions in city management last week. It has met with considerable opposition.

TINNERS GIVEN BOMB TERMS

William Blakeney, 28, and his brother, Albert Blakeney, 31, who operated a tin shop in Hamilton avenue, today were to begin two to four-year terms in the workhouse imposed by Judge Sylvester J. Snee in Criminal Court, after they had been found guilty of bombing the tin shop of a rival, Edward Dorn, 7285 Hamilton avenue, May 23. The charge was malicious mischief by means of an explosion.

It was testified they bought a piece of 2-inch gas pipe, 12 inches long, with caps on both ends, from a Homewood hardware dealer, and that they had made threats against Dorn and against John Blakeney, their older brother, who was friendly with Dorn. They denied the charge and said they ordered the pipe for a customer.

LEAVES STAGE -:- Ends Up School Marm In Hollywood -:- IN THE THEATERS -:- Critics See New Films And Have Their Say

Minna Gombell Finds Herself Teaching Drama School On Studio Lot

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1931, by Consolidated Press.)

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 10.

Coming out here to do a stage play, she was signed by Fox, and one fine morning found herself at the head of a dramatic school for young actresses on the lot.

Never having gone anything [illegible] the kind, Minna was somewhat daunted. She soon took heart though, and nowadays is a glib instructress. Some of her pupils have been Maureen O'Sullivan, who Minna says was troubled with mannerisms; Claire Maynard, teacher's pet Helen Mack, Peggy Ross and a number of other budding starlets.

Minna Gombell

The Fox school, of course, is not unique in Hollywood. Warners and Samuel Goldwyn are experimenting in similar fashion.

It's different, however, for Minna. And though she's being a good soldier, her real interest is in acting. But Fox proved what one can do along these lines. I predict that any day now Fox may find her too valuable as a player to continue her duties as schoolmarm.

TAKING NO CHANCES

The other morning Arthur Brisbane ran an item about a New York professor who says that men who whistle usually are morons.

Ever since El Brendel has been teaching his dog to respond to a cornet.

MORE GOSSIP

George Arliss has a double who is getting himself wined and dined in Texas towns. . . Most colorful social event of the season was the "Bathroom Shower" given to Jimmy Durante by a group of Hollywood's most famous beauties. The affair was held at the Embassy Club and Jimmy's hostesses were Billie Dove, Evelyn Brent, June Collyer, Leila Hyams, Carmel Myers and Sally Eilers. "Schnozzle" was the only male at the party. . . Marsh Duffield, pinch-hitting for Fred Waring, took Dorothy Lee to see her first opera the other night. . . This is a long shot, but I hear R-K-O is looking about for a suitable vehicle for Emil Jannings. Lilyan Tashman and Ed Lowe are said to have sailed from New York with 16 trunks and a flock of hand-baggage. What fun the customs officers will have. . . That polo team of Darryl Zanucks will upset the Olympic Club outfit in San Francisco the latter part of the month.

STRONG MAN BREAKS

It was amusing to see Bill Powell's panic in anticipation of being master of ceremonies for Warner Brothers' newest cinema palace in Los Angeles.

Quaked Bill:

"It's my first personal appearance since I left the stage. I'm expected to be a cross between Will Rogers, Eddie Cantor and Demosthenes. They can't understand that I left my orators at school."

The awful truth is Bill was a cheer-leader.

Plays, Players and By-Play

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Edith Barrett, who is co-starred with Sir Guy Standing in "Mrs. Moonlight," which will bust open the Professional Players' subscription season in the Alvin Monday night, made her professional debut six years ago in the company of Walter Hampden. She was featured in the long New York run of A. A. Milne's comedy, "Michael and Mary," and last season she was elevated to stardom in "Mrs. Moonlight."

Pittsburgh will be the only city to see "Reunion in Vienna," starring Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne, before it is presented in New York. This Monday premiere of Robert E. Crook Play For Haines Amusing

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Some of the old Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford yarns of George Randolph Chester have been turned into another highly entertaining picture for William Haines, the irrepressible fresh kid of the screen. With his two rôles played by Ernest Torrence and Jimmy Durante, he has brought out all his schemes on the screen at the Penn Theater and at last wins the lovely Leila Hyams, while the detective in the story gets badly left.

George Seibel

Dedicated to the great truth that "a fool and his money are soon parted," and that the population of the United States consists principally of fools, Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford is an inspiring spectacle.

Of course Wallingford turns straight at the finish and Leila remains a good girl throughout so there's nothing to worry about.

The three musketeers of this picture are a confidence man, a forger and a pickpocket.

If they tried those tricks in real life, Haines would get slapped twice a day and probably tarred and feathered before the week was over. The other pair would be making brooms most of the time.

But on the screen it's easy to follow a career of triumphant crime, because everybody else is so stupid and the heroine can't help loving the leading man.

Torrence and Durante are the most amusing elements in this concoction—Haines is always the same. Durante is especially amusing as the pickpocket Schnozzle, with his excruciating nose.

The three of them work hard to prove that there's honor among thieves. It is easier to believe that than that there is so much stupidity among honest men.

The picture is fair to middling farce comedy with a dubious lesson.

Reverend Holt Watches His Son on Screen

If you have seen Jack Holt punching, kicking, riding through a film plot or diving, as in "Fifty Fathoms Deep," his latest Columbia vehicle, you will no doubt be surprised to learn that the "salty" Jack is the son of an Episcopal minister. There must be pioneer blood in that Holt family somewhere though, for Jack left the parsonage early in life to become in turn a cowpuncher, freighter, civil engineer, mining prospector, Alaskan mail-carrier, movie daredevil and finally a star. Strangely enough, the situation is a knockout blow to the sob sisters for Jack's folks are proud of him and the premiere of each of his films finds the elder Holts watching intently and with a twinkle in their eyes.

All In A Day

By Mark Hellinger

People I've Met

CHARLES B. DILLINGHAM. One of the grandest characters in the producing racket. Plenty of years behind him in the theatrical business, and still rated as one of America's premier showmen. They like him immensely along the street. They like him because he has been real, square and human. For Broadway, that's an unusual salute.

Of recent days, Dillingham hasn't had the smash successes he enjoyed in former years. Conditions haven't been the same, and he hasn't been particularly fortunate in his choice of plays. But the man is a born gambler. He takes the raps with an outward smile that is nobody's business. Maybe it's his sense of humor that has always carried him through.

There was that time, for instance, that he engaged William Anthony McGuire to complete a script for him. Bill is one of the best authors in the theater, but he is notorious for his undependability in the delivery of promised manuscripts. He will turn in one act, or possibly two, that read extremely well. The producer casts his play, and then almost dies before Bill turns up with the last act.

McGuire did the same thing to Dillingham on a certain play. The producer waited and waited for McGuire to turn up with the last act of the show. But the time passed, and McGuire failed to come in to the office. Dillingham was suddenly taken seriously ill and was called to a hospital. The best specialists in town examined him and none was certain that he would pull through.

Sick as he was, then, the producer sent to the storehouse for the long wig and beard that Fred Stone had worn in the Dillingham production of "Ripples." The stuff was delivered to his bedside—and the producer motioned to his nurse.

"Lesie, these handy," he told her, "and when the doctors arrive in the morning, tell them I've gone through a terrific change. I want to see their faces."

The nurse did as directed. When the doctors stepped into the room, there was Dillingham propped up in bed. The wig gave him a huge head of hair, and the long, flowing beard reached almost to his knees.

One of the doctors leaped forward.

"Mr. Dillingham," he howled, "what has happened?"

The sick man grinned.

"Nothing," he murmured. "I just wanted to give you gentlemen an idea of what I'll look like when McGuire hands me my last act!"

Although it is not generally known, Dillingham holds the first American contract ever made with Maurice Chevalier. The producer saw the man work in Paris and recognized in him a great box office draw in America. Accordingly, after a consultation, he signed Maurice for a long term of years to be starred in the United States.

As Maurice himself will tell you, he was afraid to come over here at that time. Although Dillingham kept cabling him about his plans, Chevalier hated to make the leap. He was doing exceptionally well in Paris, and was the star of stars on the other side of the pond. Why, he felt, come over here to compete with Jolson and the other great American box office magnates?

Dillingham didn't insist on a fulfillment of his contract. He knew that, if Chevalier wasn't happy, he would never be able to do his best. He finally invited Maurice to be his guest over here, and to grab a load of our fair town. There were no strings attached to the invitation. If Chevalier still thought an American appearance would be too great a risk, he could go right back. Dillingham meant it—and Chevalier accepted. He came to New York, spent a few weeks with us, and then returned to Paris.

Some time later, Jesse Lasky caught Chevalier in England and immediately came to the conclusion that the French star would be a riot in pictures. He arranged a conference with the charming Maurice and offered him an excellent proposition.

The actor said he was willing to accept. He was more certain of himself now, and he felt that the talkies would afford him a great medium. But, he pointed out, Charles Dillingham held a long-term contract with him, and it would be necessary for him to get permission to work for Paramount from the producer.

Lasky was enthusiastic.

"That will be easy," he cried. "Charlie Dillingham is an old pal of mine and I know that he'll never stand in the way. I'll get his okay and everything will be set. He's a swell fellow and we won't have the slightest trouble."

"You visited him, Maurice, and you know how grand he is to everyone. I never knew him to hold back anyone yet. And he certainly isn't going to start with you."

The Paramount executive knew what he was talking about. Without demanding anything at all, Dillingham immediately gave his permission to Lasky. With the result that Maurice came to this country and turned out his first talking picture.

The developments you know as well as I. Chevalier employing the most remarkable personal magnetism the screen has ever known, immediately jumped into the front ranks of the picture stars. Today he is probably the biggest box office attraction in the country. And because he has been so thoroughly regular under all conditions, there is none who envies him his success.

A few nights ago, the Friars Club tendered a dinner to Maurice Chevalier. It was one of the biggest events of the season, and everybody who meant anything in New York turned out to pay their respects to Maurice. The affair was held in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Astor.

On the Fifth floor of the same hotel sat Charles B. Dillingham. He was alone in his room, and he sat facing a radio. Over the instrument was coming the report of that great dinner to Maurice Chevalier. And there was Dillingham, just five stories away.

It wasn't Maurice's fault that Dillingham wasn't at the main table with him. It wasn't the fault of the Friars. It was just one of those things that are bound to happen along the street called Broadway. Just one of those things we call an oversight.

So Charles Dillingham attended the Chevalier dinner by the radio route. He smiled with the speakers and he nodded his applause at a fine statement. But I wonder if deep down, he didn't feel the least bit strange.

Here he was, a producer who holds a contract with Chevalier. The French star in a Dillingham show today would go a long way toward recouping the losses that Charles Dillingham must have suffered. He hears the acclaim but he cannot join in. He is the owner of a star, yet the star does not belong to him.

Slightly ironic, isn't it?

Gov. Pinchot In Hearst News

THE GLOBE TROTTER

Gov. Pinchot is shown breaking ground near Sharon for the great Pymatuning Dam project in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News, showing in the Penn and other theaters. The chief executive of the commonwealth is seen and heard as he outlines plans for the immense work.

President Hoover's latest move to aid in the return of prosperity also is presented. Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Mills clearly explains the President's proposal so that anybody is able to understand it fully.

There is a picture from Wenatchee, Wash., at which point Pangborn and Herndon, the Japan-to-United States fliers completed their epochal trip. Hearst Metrotone News cameraman arrived at the field in time to get the fliers climbing out of their airship after having set it down minus its landing gear. Pangborn's mother gives both of the intrepid fliers a big hug and a kiss and the air heroes tell the thrilling story of their flight to Metrotone.

Another picture shows Mahatma Gandhi on his visit to Lancashire, England, where thousands of workers have been thrown out of employment partly because of India's boycott of English cotton goods. Yet the workers and their families greet Gandhi courteously and cheerfully.

Former Minister Briand and Premier Laval, of France, in Berlin, discuss plans for the financial rehabilitation of Germany. Enormous crowds pack the Wilhelmstrasse, as shouts of approval and friendly cheers reach the visiting statesman.

From Leeds, England, are views of a caterpillar tractor turning over during a hill-climbing contest. After negotiating the greater part of the terrifically steep climb it tips over backwards. The driver leaps, but is struck by the falling monster and killed!

Hello, Pal

Gwen Lee apparently wants Conrad Nagel for a pal in this scene from "Pagan Lady," but he doesn't appear enthused. The film comes to the Davis and Enright Monday.

Builds 'Em High

Bill Powell Detours in Stanley

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

Sometimes reputations have false faces.

This is a line from "The Road to Singapore," current talkie in the Stanley. And it is about the only thing in the picture that will be remembered longer than a week.

"The Road to Singapore," incidentally William Powell's first film since he left Paramount studios, is another of those triangle dramas exhibited in tropical settings. It arouses mild interest, like a familiar face you have seen somewhere before, but which doesn't mean much to you—the policeman on your beat or the huckster, for examples.

MAYBE IT'S THE HEAT

The story is this: Young wife, married to busy doctor, falls in love with romantic home-wrecker. Husband finds this out, gets revolver and points it at the intruding Romeo. But does he kill him? No! Intruding Romeo talks to his cigaret lighter and somehow this so affects the husband that he doesn't shoot. Sounds silly? Well . . . maybe it's just the tropical heat!

If you're a fan of the polished Mr. Powell there might be enough shine about the picture to put it over. There is no doubt that Mr. Powell is a capable actor in the suave, dignified and sophisticated stuff. But his current story handicaps him a lot.

SNORES AND DRUMS

The picture, in addition to its other sins and virtues, also looms forth as a looney rhapsody of noises. There are the sounds of wild jungle drums and of civilized snores, gargles and sighs.

Doris Kenyon and Louis Calhern are sufficient in supporting roles.

From here, "The Road to Singapore" looks like a movie detour for Mr. William Powell.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Oct. 10.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

After "Pep" Martin fell down on me so hard yesterday there just ain't much to do talk about but Mr. Hoover and his "relief for "frozen assets."

We had heard of all kinds of relief — drought, grasshopper and potato bug — but the general run of us didn't know that these frozen assets were in such bad shape till this plan came along. In fact, we didn't know what a frozen asset was, but now everything is clear. If you got a little frozen asset in your house, why the Federal Reserve will take it over. Everything's "jake" now.

Yours, WILL.

A Columnist's Sec'y Jots Down a Few Notes

Dear W. W.: Have I some swelegant news for you? . . . Guess what? . . . Morton Downey will be your Oct. 20th guestar! . . . I think that's grand, considering that five years ago you gave Morton his first boost in print . . . That new parlor game started by Libby Holman has caught on with lots of people, according to their calls and letters . . . Here's mine: Nick the Greek's had a word for it! . . . The photo that was on the Republic (Minsky's) front the other day was taken down the next day—Police Comm. Mulrooney's magic, of course. . . . J. P. Morgan's firm has fired the office boy staff and cut the menu on the daily free lunch shamefully . . . Kinsmen of Charles M. Rosenthal, who was kidnaped, object to your query of Monday . . . I told the voice you had asked about a Charles Rosenthal. After looking up the records I find that such a person was arrested in a stabbing case as you so stated. . . There are exactly a dozen Charles Rosenthals in the Manhattan phone directory . . . And they stifle yawns.

Few people know that the Eugenie hatrocities were influenced by Ann Harding's garb in "East Lynne." She looked so well in one of them that the idea got into the heads of the stylists, who got richer. . . Mr. Paley, president of WABC, called. Said it would be okay for you to get your continuity in on Mondays instead of Fridays before the broadcasts . . . He hopes you won't fail him, however . . . I vowed you wouldn't, and that you'd be happier preparing the copy, for then you could make it timelier . . . Cab Calloway and his Cotton Clubmen will do "Nobody's Sweetheart" for you this Tuesday evening . . . I asked him to repeat "Star Dust," too, with which he now is so well identified . . . Nobody sings it so well as Cab . . . You might complain to the park commissioner that the reason the town has mosquitoes is that there is a large stagnant pool in Central Park at 101st and CPW.

The conservative N. Y. Times has finally accepted "whoopee."

In its acct. of the Herndon-Pangborn flight from Japan it said: "Wenatchee tonight made whoopee". . . They all fall in line in time, no? . . . A friend of mine saw the Peter Arno show in Detroit. . . The song hits she says, include: "Shake Well Before Using," "Hello, My Lover," "Music in My Fingers" and "My Sweetheart, 'Tis of Thee". . . One of the wows, she says, comes when Paul McCullough, disguised in feminine attire, is caught peeking through a keyhole of a hotel room and Bobby Clark shouts: "Why, Mrs. Winchell!" . . . Morris Gest was in. Wants you to help him on a new curtain-raiser for his next show. . . Told him you were cutting out magazine articles because of all the routines . . . He said it would take no time at all, and persisted. . . Something like his well-known curtain of celebs that Ralph Barton did a long time ago. . . Wants you to supply the list of well-knowns with a one-line crack synonymous for each of them. . . How've y'been?

If applicants for prohibition officer jobs admit that they have tasted intoxicants during the last year they are turned down . . . It's a racket, by the way, this becoming a prohib agent . . . It costs applicants $5.50 for a physical exam—the 50 cents being for photos . . . Then you spend $40 (one guy did) to "prepare for the examination" . . . Serves anyone right who would become one! . . . You can buy some nice modern apartment houses on Central Park West, for a song, if (but what an If!) you pay the back taxes plus interest. . . Vincent Youmans' son, "Time on My Hands," is the rage of London. Vincent sold the rights for England, however, and doesn't rate a penny. . . It's a hit here, too, and was thrown out of Ziegfeld's "Smiles" because Ziggie said it was ng. . . . Did you hear about the producer who was in Moore's and the waiter said: "Want cream in your coffee?" . . . The producer's reply was, "Nope. Not until I get a hit."

Mr. Schwartz called. Suggests calling them burlesque shows. . . His simile is better: "Tight as a columnist's hat". . . The American Legion is sore, I hear, because a downtown firm let Gen. Pershing's male stenog go the other day. . . The line run by that Irish paper about the columnist who said, "We have no enemies—but our friends hate us!" is not original with that writer. . . In one of Shaw's letters to Ellen Terry he wrote that that is what Wilde once said about him. A Times Square barber shop has sandwich men parading the byways advertising "Cheap Haircuts". . . They can't be so cheap, for the sandwich men apparently can't afford them. . .

Dorothy Day, who was in the Belasco plays and other shows, wishes you would make it clear that the Dorothy Day in "Left Bank" is a different person. . . She's afraid casting agents will think she's already employed. . . Miriam Hopkins arrives in town today under a different name. . . Just got her divorce, you know. . . I didn't know she was that pretty. . . The old Lido reopens Friday night. . . Want you there. Told them you seldom went to the night clubs any more. . . And probably wouldn't go again until they tried something different and good. . . . Did you know that the Theater Guild let Edward G. Robinson go because they thought his salary demands were too high? . . . $200 per? . . . May I see "The Good Companions?"

The Palace press agent's arithmetic is poor. . . Kate Smith is in her tenth week, not eleventh. . . . Here's a suggestion for Reuben's—they menu "the Eddie Buzzell—Ona Munson Special". . . It should be "the Ernest Lubitsch-Munson Special". . . Estelle Taylor is all thrilled over her newest pursuer. He has quite a New York rep. . . . Helen Morgan is quitting the "Follies" to achieve her life-long ambition—a dramatic role in Hammerstein's next show. . . .

Dooley Child Steals Show At Sheridan

By MARGARET RUSSELL.

Faith, personality and cherry pie is the unbeatable combination employed by Eddie Dowling, Ray Dooley and Mary Carr in "Honeymoon Lane" at the Sheridan Square this week. Dowling and James Hanley's screen version is an amazing step-child of the stage show.

Dowling as Jim Dugan, a square-shooting dealer in a classy gambling resort, falls in love in approved cinema fashion with Mary Baggott (June Collyer), the niece of his employer (Noah Beery). When Baggott tells him to leave town because he will not cheat, Dugan becomes the self-appointed manager of a down and out inn nearby and proceeds to do Baggott dirt, by annexing a king who comes to town.

Ray Dooley as Gerty, the precocious grandchild of Ma Murphy, who owns the hotel, steals the picture from Eddie and everybody else. Raymond Hatton, as Dynamite, and another "gorilla" with an unspellable name furnish slapstick elements such as pie-eating, fish breaking and a wrestling match.

The Rambling Reporter in Algeria, with the Matto Grosso expedition in Pathe News, and June MacCloy and Marion Shilling, in "Take 'Em and Shake 'Em," a Gay Girls' Comedy, completed the program.

Women Urged Not to Shirk by Legislator

Enrichment of life through better adjustment of human relationships was the theme of Mrs. David Denman's talk given yesterday before the Woman's Club of Crafton at a luncheon in the Congress of Clubs. Women are not taking their full share of responsibility as citizens, she said, adding that they need vision and a program in their work that life may be enriched individually, in the community and internationally.

In line with a resolution to be presented at the coming State Federation convention, Mrs. Denman, who is a member of the Pennsylvania Legislature, avoided the use of the word "depression" and suggested that the "uses of adversity" might be made "sweet" by the right outlook and a wise use of time. To illustrate, she said in September, 1930, the library in her home town, Latrobe, had circulated only 5,600 books and in September of this year 7,600 had been loaned among them many technical books not formerly asked for.

Yesterday's luncheon marked the opening of the Crafton club's season and also served to honor Mrs. Ralph S. Davis, a past president, who is soon to make her home in St. Louis. Mrs. W. E. Brosius, the president, welcomed the 150 members and their guests and introduced the more distinguished of these—Mrs. John E. McKirdy, district president of the State Federation; Mrs. H. J. Fox, Allegheny County president; Mrs. T. M. Stahlman, president of the Congress; Mrs. William Lehew, of the juniors, and Mrs. Davis. Mrs. McKirdy expressed confidence that women will show sympathy and courage during the present period of world stress. Mrs. Davis made a brief talk, so fine in spirit and text that Mrs. Denman later said the women should have adjourned when it was finished.

Mrs. Davis Speaks

A delightful program of music was provided by the club violin ensemble, Mrs. C. C. Moyar, Mrs. Margaret Hertzler Hirsom and Mrs. Ralph Smith, with Mrs. Herman Ziel accompanying.

To avoid an appearance of extravagance, the decorations for both the lounge, where a reception was held, and for the tables were brought from the gardens of members. Tiny pots of ivy, tied in the club colors, green and white, were the place favors, and on all the tables but the honor one the flowers were ageratum and white carnations, the purple being in compliment to the juniors, whose official color it is.

Mr. Hoover is receiving the caravan at 12:30 o'clock. Tonight there's a dinner at the Willard Hotel, with Miss Jane Addams as guest of honor, and tomorrow a mass meeting will be held in the Belasco Theater, at which Miss Addams will preside.

Horton, a book luncheon, a Zoar Home sewing, a special Christmas program, an afternoon devoted to study of tableware, a home economics day, a discussion of birth control, a flower exchange and the annual business meeting are all listed in the new year books of the Brookside Woman's Club.

SLEEVES CARRY THE BURDEN OF THE NEW AUTUMN MODE

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Oct. 10 — By its cuffs shall you know it—as a frock or jacket of this season's crop. Sleeves carry the burden of much of the mode this year. First we had oversleeves with long narrow cuffs, then puffed sleeves or arms covered with fabric cut on wholly correct leg-o-mutton lines. Now come wide cuffs, bishop's sleeves and other cuffly glories. There's no doubt about it, there is a picturesque note about the wide cuff whether it be on frock or coat and it is especially luxurious when it is fur banded, as it is being done this season. Then, too, the glove gets a chance to expose its crinkled or wrinkled surface with grand eclat and effect. Wide cuffs of white are very good with black frocks and they give even the largest, most utilitarian hand a soft, delicate appeal. And that's something when hands have been gripping tennis raquets or golf clubs through the years.

* * *

WORTH HAS BEEN doing some successful things with his new autumn and early winter ensembles and we herewith show sketches of one of his most successful numbers. He uses short jackets over woolen frocks of the same fabric. The model here depicted goes in for cuffs in every big way and is done in a fancy weave black woolen. The little coat is trimmed with astrakan and is further embellished with black and silver buttons.

* * *

THE DRESS also of the woolen, has a wide collar and even wider, slashed cuffs done in white marocain and cut in horizontal bands, stitched edge to edge. The cuffs reach up to the elbow and are diagonally applied. Fancy black and silver buttons close the frock in front, even to the wrap-over skirt. There is a narrow belt of red grosgrain ribbon that ties in a neat little bow. This type of ensemble looks like being a huge success among smart women here.

ABANDONMENT OF long commercial credits in radio advertising was being considered seriously by several local accounts today following the action of the National Sugar Refining Company of New Jersey in announcing only the name of the company and advising listeners to read the newspapers for advertisements of their product. . . . The sugar company, after two years of radio advertising in the usual manner, departed from the custom the other night in its regular NBC coast-to-coast program. . . . Listeners in all parts of the country praised the plan, which, although entirely new from a network standpoint, has been used a few times by local sponsors who called listeners' attention to advertisements appearing in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

Darrell V. Martin

Bainbridge Colby, former Secretary of State in Woodrow Wilson's cabinet, discusses the "War Debt Moratorium" over WCAE at 7:15 tonight.

The Red Caps Quartet, discovered in a New York railroad station by Tom Noonan, perform a doubleheader—KQV at 4:30 this afternoon and WWSW at 9 tonight . . . also good, the First Nighter sketch on KDKA at 9:30, unfolding a newspaper plot similar to that of "Five Star Final."

Question a Day:

An article on your page not long ago stated that a Minnesota station had difficulty broadcasting because its signals were absorbed by coal and ore deposits in the vicinity. I have been told that WJAS had the same handicap from a coal mine. How was this remedied?—Ernest H., Greentree Borough.

Answer — We remember the situation. Engineers worked for weeks solving it. Efficiency of the station had been decreased about 15 per cent. Engineers discovered that the station aerial was erected parallel with steel tracks of a coal mine some 300 feet below the surface. The vacuity of the tunnel and the attraction of the rails presented a strange electric phenomenon, combining to reach out and grasp the station signals like a huge octopus. Direction of the aerial was changed and reflectors were installed to gain maximum efficiency.

The Three Doctors who scaled the heights of fame in the Middle West belong to NBC as part of the WMAQ purchase . . and they start to work Monday and daily thereafter except Saturday and Sunday over the blue network (KDKA) at 3:30 . .

We're certainly surprised that the networks didn't come to some sort of an agreement on the World Series and the Notre Dame-Northwestern football game this afternoon . . at least one of the three major chains could have been turned over to the gridiron battle . .

Rosetta Duncan of the Duncan Sisters and Ginger Rogers are billed for the Theater of the Air on WCAE next Friday night . . .

Both President and Mrs. Herbert Hoover are to be heard on the network Monday, Columbus Day . . . the President is to address the convention of police chiefs in St. Petersburg, Fla., from his study in the White House, while Mrs. Hoover is to christen the flying boat, American Clipper, and perhaps speak from it in the air . . .

CBS is not to be outdone . . when NBC added two new stations CBS added WKBH, La Crosse, Wis., just to be sure the score was still in their favor, 85 to 81 . . .

Well, Mr. Brown!

Mr. Andrew H. Brown, of the Fresh Air Taxicab Company, who has complained publicly for months that his feet hurt him, has received in his mail a pair of brogues measuring thirteen and a quarter by four and a quarter inches, size fifteen 4-A.

The shoes, sent by an unknown benefactor of Rockland, Mass., arrived by special delivery and were received via the freight elevator at NBC's New York studios. Transportation charges were thirty-nine cents.

Advised in Chicago, Mr. Brown requested that the shoes be forwarded C. O. D., to Paul Whiteman, so as the portly musician could break them in. "If they was a hat," Andy explained, "I would give it to my friend Amos." Meanwhile he'll stick to his fresh air slippers.

The Loudspeaker

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—So the big game hunters of radio have bagged H. G. Wells, are leading him directly to their trophy rooms the minute he arrives in America. Can't imagine a more effective publicity start for visiting British lecturers than a radio talk to the nation as soon as they come down the gangplank.

Strange, visiting British lecturers haven't been led to microphones before! Broadcasters last season muffed Chesterton and Priestly . . Only two days before American symphony bands come into their own on the radio. The M. Paley, chief croupier at Columbia, will sacrifice thousands of advertising dollars to give the regulation hour and 45 minutes to Stokowski and the Philadelphia Orchestra. Last showman of all symphony maestros, Stokowski, knows the art of publicity, invariably provides good copy. And of all big time maestros takes the radio most seriously.

Two weeks have elapsed without a testimonial banquet. . . . Most unusual testimonial banquet to receive the attention of the radio kings was that tendered to Joseph E. Widener, overlord of Belmont Park, with race horses in attendance. . . . Anecdotes of famous horsemen might provide Clem McCarthy with some radio periods this winter. Clem must know hundreds of diverting race track anecdotes. . . . Great saver of paragraphs, this three dot stuff. First of the present-day three-dot-chatterers was a book commentator who columned for the Evening Post under the name of Kenelm Digby . . Julia Sanderson went 'way back to her first song hit, "Laughing Little Almond Eyes," from "Fantana," the other night. Tinkly little tune, of the pre-fox trot era. Not so long ago song-writers were composing pieces in one-step tempo. Today the one-step is hopelessly dated, dated in favor of the fox trot, the blues and the hill-billy ballad.

Grid Players to View Notre Dame Film Epic

WILLIAM BAKEWELL — LEW AYRES

STARS—MOVIE AND GRIDIRON—IN 'SPIRIT OF NOTRE DAME'

Pittsburgh Teams Sun-Telegraph's Preview Guests

When "The Spirit of Notre Dame" is shown at the special Stanley Theater preview tomorrow night, the affair will take on the aspect of a real football party because the guests will include the players of all the Pittsburgh college teams at home and their coaches, several hundred players from the Pittsburgh public and parochial school teams and their coaches, with Jock Sutherland and Elmer Layden, coaches respectively at Pitt and Duquesne, as speakers.

The party is being given by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph through the courtesy of Warner Brothers. Admission will be by ticket only, tickets having already been mailed to the coaches of each team.

The appearance of Coach Layden will be of particular interest because he appears in "The Spirit of Notre Dame" in the various activities of the "Four Horsemen" of football fame, who take an important part in the story and filming of this remarkable sports classic—the dream of the lamented Rockne that came true.

Lew Ayres was Rockne's own choice for the lead with William Bakewell as his "buddy" in the film play. "The Spirit of Notre Dame" features two of the most popular young actors on the screen today.

Andy Devine, J. Farrell MacDonald, who bears a striking resemblance to Rockne; Harry Barris, the composer-actor; Sally Blane, Florence Lake, Frank Carideo, twice All-American quarterback; the famous Notre Dame "Four Horsemen" and 10 other celebrated Notre Dame screen players not only participate in the stirring football sequence of the film, but carry on throughout the entire production.

Game Celebrators Warned, Discharged

A too-moist pre-celebration of the annual football classic between the University of Pittsburgh and West Virginia University, ended in Central Police Station early today for Peter Hamilton, 23, and Marian Meredith, Fairmont, W. Va., students at West Virginia University. Arraigned before Magistrate Leo Rothenberg they were discharged after the magistrate had warned them to "layoff" Pittsburgh moonshine.

'Facing the Crisis' Topic for Sermon

"Facing the Crisis" will be the morning subject of the Rev. Samuel Hill, of the Butler Street Methodist Episcopal Church, Fortieth and Butler streets. At the evening service his subject will be "The Soul Neglected."

Pittsburgh Officer Assigned to Duty

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—(AP.)—Active duty at the Philadelphia quartermaster depot has been assigned by the War Department to Maj. Ernest Ray Raumaker, Pittsburgh, and First Lieut. Adam Meiklejohn, Altoona. They are to report October 18 and 19 for two weeks' service.

A charming example is shown today in this peplum frock of brown canton crepe with yoke, bow trimming and sleeve facing of rust satin. The original model has the peplum attached to the belt, giving opportunity to wear the frock with or without it. You might combine brown with green, black with green, white or red, or develop the dress in one color with a lace yoke.

STEEL OUTPUT TO GAIN IN JANUARY

Present Month Promises To Mark Bottom for Automobile Production

By B. E. V. LUTY

Precedents are very strong for a marked steel increase immediately after January 1. In poor times demand sinks so much late in the year that it has to have a rebound just the same. In the majority of lines steel requirements tend to decrease late in the year, and that was true of the automobile trade until last year, when November was the low month instead of December, and this year October promises to be the low month.

The October 1 ten per cent general wage reduction in the steel industry went into effect without causing a ripple as to either labor or steel prices. Finished steel prices have declined about 28 per cent since 1923 when a wage advance was made instituting the rates now reduced 10 per cent. Meanwhile tonnage wage rates, controlled by the union sliding scale, according to prices realized, have declined about 27 per cent. The Amalgamated Association is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor and Senator Davis used to be a puddler, yet both Mr. Green and Mr. Davis have criticized the steel wage reduction, apparently not admitting that nonunion wages should go down when union wages do.

BANK PLAN O. K'D

Among steel sellers there is very favorable comment on the bank support plan now being put into execution, the only criticism being that this should have been done months ago. It is too early to observe any reaction on the part of steel buyers, but for months it has been remarked that either from fear or lack of banking accommodations steel buyers were carrying stocks much below what would seem to be an efficient level, and buying in such very small lots at a time as to increase mill costs. There are chances that conditions in these respects may be improved. Certainly steel producers have no thoughts of lower prices in the visible future, and not a few attempts are likely to be made to advance prices for the first quarter of the new year.

PRICES FIRM

The whole finished steel market is in fact very firm, prices indeed showing a rigidity greater than can be recalled at any time in the past, the mills individually being punctilious in avoiding anything that would look like a concession even in minute details.

There is a little more rail inquiry out and additional inquiries are said to be in near prospect, but it is very doubtful whether the seasonal buying movement will be nearly as early, or anything like as large, as those in recent years, even that of a year ago when there was a fair sized decrease while about 20 per cent of the rails then put under contract have not yet been ordered out.

BANKING POOL TO CARRY ON RELIEF

New Organization to Do Work Strong Institutions Formerly Did Informally

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 10.—The half billion dollar banking pool which, at President Hoover's request, is now in process of formation, will carry on in a more formal and systematic manner the banking relief work which the strong city banks were already informally performing for their country correspondents.

Mr. Rukeyser

The advantage of the new set-up is largely psychological indicating as it does, that America's unparalleled gold holdings and credit resources will be mobilized effectively to maintain solvent banking institutions.

On account of radical changes in the portfolio of banks since the Federal Reserve act was passed in 1913, the eligibility rules of the system are somewhat obsolete. It is not so much that the framers of the act lacked foresight as that the banks themselves emerged from straight commercial banking and became to a greater extent than ever before investment institutions. Before the panic, more than half the banking resources of the country were tied up in securities and loans against securities.

ASSETS INELIGIBLE

Under conditions of stress the member banks naturally look to the Federal Reserve for cash. But only a fraction of the average banks assets are eligible collateral for advances or for rediscounting at the Federal Reserve. Member banks can get help from the Federal Reserve only on the basis of their holdings of United States government obligations and prime commercial paper.

The banking pool is intended to give banks, needing cash, the opportunity to realize on sound, but ineligible assets, such as bonds. President Hoover has said that he will ask Congress to change the eligibility rules. Some bankers would broaden the eligibility rules to include a selected list of bonds. One proposal is that state and municipal bonds be made eligible for Federal Reserve advances to member banks, and a few more radical bankers would include a few gilt edged corporations bonds. In London the joint stock banks can get accommodations at the Bank of England with securities as collateral by means of so-called Lombard loans.

BONDS DUMPED

Prior to the formation of the pool, strong and liquid city banks, acting independently, have been trying to take care of their country bank correspondents by making loans secured by bonds.

However, in case the banking borrower closed his institution, the lender promptly tossed the collateral on the market. Accordingly, weakness in the bond market has followed important bank closings. It is hoped that the banking pool will lessen the flood of necessitous bank selling bonds.

Wall street was eagerly watching for news from Washington on the railroad rate increase, in view of persistent reports that the Interstate Commerce Commission was soon to hand down its decision. Many guesses were heard, but virtually all of the forecasters throught a rise, perhaps on a sliding scale, would be granted.

Announcement that the Chicago Clearing House Association's executive committee had voted to recommend participation of its members in the credit corporation meant that the country's largest banks were behind the project and indications are that subscriptions will now exceed $500,000,000.

For the third successive week bank clearings showed a gain over the preceding week. This time the rise was about 11 per cent, although the total represented a decrease of slightly more than that percentage from the same period last year.

The London Stock Exchange closed quiet, and foreign exchanges mostly favored the pound. Sterling here opened at $3.87, off half a cent.

ROUND TABLE OF BUSINESS

LOCAL DAIRY USES METAL SEAL

'Silver Seal' Developed by Aluminum Company After 5 Years' Laboratory Work

An entirely new device for sealing milk bottles in the dairy before distribution to the housewives in Pittsburgh and vicinity has been adopted by the Meadow Gold Dairies. Many housewives in this section probably were startled when they found their milk bottles closed not with the old-fashioned paper caps, but with the new "silver seal" which has been developed after more than five years of experimental work in the laboratories of the Aluminum Company of America in New Kensington.

C. D. Hutchinson, president of Meadow Gold Dairies, said:

"Milk dealers the world over have long sought a more practical, more sanitary, and more convenient method of sealing milk bottles than the paper or pasteboard cap now commonly used. This has been achieved in the laboratories of thesAluminum Company of America, which has developed the 'silver seal' to be used exclusively in our Meadow Gold Milk dairies.

NEW BOTTLES NECESSARY

"The 'silver seal' does away with the indentation on the top of the milk bottle in which the old-fashioned cap of paper used to fit and which was very difficult to clean and still more difficult for the housewife to keep clean even during the short period in which milk is kept in the home in the new 'silver seal' bottles which had to be developed the same time with the aluminum cap, all the edges are perfectly rounded to permit absolute sterilization.

"The seal which covers the entire top of the bottle is made of thin aluminum and can be removed much more readily without danger of splashing than the old-fashioned paper cap. This equipment, which will be standard in Pittsburgh and vicinity, is regarded as one of the outstanding developments in the advance made in the hygienic handling of milk since pasteurization itself was developed."

SEAL APPROVED

Meadow Gold Dairies, Inc., is among the first dairies in the United States to be supplied with "silver seals" as standard equipment. "Silver seal" milk thus can be distinguished from any of the others because of the shining, glistening tops of its containers. Thus milk is delivered to the housewife just as it leaves the sanitary bottling room of the dairy. Accumulations of dust and other contaminating factors in the rim, made necessary by the old-fashioned paper caps, are absolutely done away with in the "silver seal" Meadow Gold milk bottles. The new improvement is indorsed by civic leaders, hospitals and physicians.

ADDITION TO CRESSON HOSPITAL

NEARLY COMPLETED ADDITIONAL BUILDING FOR THE STATE HOSPITAL AT CRESSON, PA.

INSTALLS NEW LIFT SYSTEM

Marshall Brothers Company passenger elevator service is being installed in the new addition to the State Hospital at Cresson, Pa.

The Marshall elevator system has the automatic push button control and is fully equipped with automatic leveling mechanism and electro-hydraulic brakes. The elevator system is noiseless in its operation.

The leveling feature is of the latest type so designed that the elevator in its ascent or descent automatically levels even with the floor. The automatic electro-hydraulic brake gives the elevators a cushioned stop doing away with sudden shock and rebound.

GLASS DEMAND TAPERS OFF

Contrary to seasonal expectations, demand for flat glass products for building purposes showed a decline in the first week of October compared with September, according to American Glass Review. Sales are much below the October 1930 mark as well as under the 10-year average. Demand for window and plate and figured and rough glass should increase at this season of the year.

Unusually warm weather in the northern states where building has been most active is blamed for the fall in demand from September. General business conditions and decreased activity in building are blamed for the decline from 1930 and the 10-year average. Distributors show no intention to add to stocks in anticipation of demand upon them before snow flies and the factories can do nothing but wait for the distributors to send orders for rush shipments.

Education Neglected by Insurance Companies

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

THE MOST INTERESTING IDEAS presented to the American Life Convention, which has just closed its sessions here, were contained in the addresses of laymen and not in the remarks of insurance experts.

The professional insurance man usually is too close to his subject to view it from a new angle or even from the angle of the buyer of a policy.

Perhaps the most important message to the convention was delivered by Frank A. Arnold, director of development for the National Broadcasting Company.

Mr. Arnold put his finger on one outstanding fact which appears to have escaped the attention of life insurance men. He declared that few individuals know anything about life insurance and that practically no one reads a policy from start to finish.

Public Uninformed

NEARLY EVERYONE HAS AT LEAST some life insurance, but the great majority of policy holders do not understand the provisions in their insurance contracts. They are not fully acquainted with the many types of life insurance and they do not know whether or not the type of policies they hold are the ones best suited for their individual needs.

Real sales effort has been put behind the marketing of life insurance, but it has not been accompanied by enough educational work to teach the general public about the wide range of services which can be performed by life insurance.

Need for Education

IN COMMENTING ON THIS PHASE of the insurance business, Mr. Arnold said:

"The need for life insurance, its various purposes—other than that of providing money for the widow in the event of the death of her husband—is rarely, if ever, presented in a convincing way. Women are especially ignorant of the purpose and function of life insurance and, as one of them expressed it a short time ago, she would almost as soon see an undertaker come into the house as a life insurance agent to sell her husband a life policy.

"The educational opportunities in teaching people at large, especially the younger generation, that life insurance can be bought as an investment, as a method of saving, as one of the ways in which an education can be assured to junior members of the family—all this work is loaded on the individual agent who doubtless does the best he can but with a load too heavy for him to shoulder alone. With here and there an exception, the life insurance companies are still using the methods of 100 years ago."

West Penn Sand Installs Modern Equipment at Beaver County Plant

After successfully operating one of the largest sand and gravel docks in Beaver County for the past six years, the West Penn Sand and Gravel Company, Rochester, has ventured into a new field with the addition of a coal yard to the plant along the Rochester-Freedom Highway.

Extensive improvements have been made at the plant in connection with the new coal yard, and the most modern equipment has been installed to enable the concern to serve residents of the valley. Provisions have been made to keep approximately 1,000 tons of coal in stock at all times.

BIG BINS BUILT

For use in storing the huge stock of coal, two big concrete bins have been constructed on the river bank close by the barge landing at the plant. Near the bins is a large derrick used for unloading the coal from barges and transferring it to the storage bins.

On the loading level at the plant are two large steel hopper type bins elevated to permit trucks to stand under the hoppers to be loaded. Each bin has a capacity of 75 tons of coal. Coal will be transported to the plant entirely by river barges.

Mike Mannella, Pittsburgh contractor, is president of the West Penn Sand and Gravel Company, and Walter E. Perkins is secretary-treasurer.

RETAIL COAL PRICES LOW

Continuation of the unseasonably high temperature is holding back the demand for the seasonal wearing apparel and sales at both wholesale and retail are rather light this week, according to R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review.

There has been a slight improvement in the demand for house furnishings, also traveling accessories, and the radio show last week caused a marked improvement in the demand for radios and accessories.

Bituminous coal production continues at a low rate and the total produced in August, 1931, was smaller than in any corresponding month since 1908 with exception of 1922 when a strike was in progress. Prices are lower than at any time in the past 15 years.

Collections in this district show no improvement and continue to average slow.

Canadian Revenues Exceed Expenses

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 10.—(AP)—Total ordinary revenue of Canada exceeded total ordinary expenditure during the 12 months ending September 30 by more than $11,000,000, a financial statement issued by the Department of Finance said. The revenue amounted to $178,975,183 and the expenditure to $167,663,305.

Mexico's Output Of Oil Declining

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 10.—(AP)—Petroleum production in Mexico in 1930 was 39,529,914 barrels, compared with 44,687,500 in 1929, and 194,755,710 in 1921, the peak year, according to statistics released by the Statistical Department of the government.

Slab Duel Series Climax. | Luch Powerful Back.

$45,000 PITCHING BATTLE IN FINALE

RATHER FITTING THAT the hardest fought world series in recent years should have as a climax today a meeting of the greatest two modern money pitchers, with the deadlocked derby narrowed down to this seventh tussle and the outcome of the entire struggle hingeing on the result of a single ball game, Burleigh Grimes and George Earnshaw had been the outstanding hurlers of the two-year grapple between the Cards and the A's, and there could have been no more appropriate finale than a situation bringing those two stars together in a slab duel on which depended not only the highest honors in baseball but also a matter of approximately $45,000, said sum representing the difference between the financial shares of the winning and the losing clubs.

'Burleig'. Grimes

Not only had Grimes and Earnshaw towered above the other series flingers through two years, but in the 1931 stakes each had equaled the record for the classic by pitching a two-hit game, a feat not previously achieved since 1921. A game that meant everything was an ideal spot for them in which to fight it out.

IN THREE GAMES pitched against the A's in 1930 and 1931, Grimes had allowed a total of only 12 hits. In five games against the Cards in the same period, Earnshaw had held them to 21 hits and had allowed them to score only four runs in 42 innings.

Mack's big righthander had pitched 38 scoreless innings out of 42, a string of 22 of them coming in succession last fall. He had never allowed more than one run to an inning, only once had permitted more than one run in a game, and had never been nicked for more than six hits in a contest. He had not been scored on in 10 consecutive innings up to today.

THOUGH IT HAD been reported that the victory of the White Sox over the Cubs in the Chicago city series might get Donie Bush a new contract as manager of the Hose, the former Bue pilot's resignation last night did not surprise baseball men. After Owner Comiskey's public criticism of his manager two months ago a parting was inevitable.

Two of the four major league pilots considered certain to go this fall are now definitely out, Jewel Ens having preceded Bush. The others are Wilbert Robinson in Brooklyn and Bucky Harris in Detroit. There is said to be a chance that Robinson may stay, but the release of Harris may be expected at any time. Muddy Ruel is the latest tipped to succeed Bucky, though Bush and Steve O'Neill have been mentioned.

ONE RECORD THAT Pepper Martin might have equaled was put beyond his reach yesterday, when Lefty Grove deprived him of his last chance to make a hit in the sixth game by giving him a base on balls in the ninth inning. That removed the possibility that Martin might hit safely in every game of the series. Only five men ever did that in a derby that went to seven games. Bucky Harris and George Kelly accomplished it in 1924, Joe Harris in 1925 against the Pirates, and Earl Combs and Jim Bottomley in 1926.

Johnny Luch

JOHNNY LUCH, who was selected to start at fullback for Pitt against West Virginia at the Stadium today, is one of the most powerfully built football players in the college ranks.

Standing 5 feet 9 inches and weighing 193, the Wheeling lad doesn't carry an ounce of fat. He is fast for a big man, but, while not awkward, as his ability as a boxer attests, he has never been able to master the arc of avoiding tacklers in the open field.

HOWEVER, THERE ARE few defense men who can bring Luch down single-handed, as he runs with his knees high and has a habit of running right over anything he knows will be difficult to get around.

The Pitt strategy board was hopeful today that the opportunity of showing his wares against a team from his home state would bring forth the spirit that had been dormant in him. Johnny is the type of gridder that plays best when emotionally aroused, and the keen rivalry between the Panthers and Mountaineers was counted on to give him the necessary impetus.

THOUGH CLIFF BATTLES, as per usual, was the big star for West Virginia Wesleyan last night in the 12-to-0 victory over Duquesne, his running and kicking keeping the Dukes in the hole all the way, the great game he played did not obscure a brilliant defensive exhibition by a team mate. Seldom have local fans seen a finer display of defensive football than was given by Joe (Tubby) Edmundson, Bobcat center. Edmundson was a whole team in himself on the defense. He broke through to nail the ball carrier before the latter could reach the line of scrimmage; he hurried and harassed the passers; he messed up three Duke attempts at reverses, and he was down the field every time under Battles' great punts, making the majority of tackles of the safety man. Quite a factor in Duquesne's defeat was Mr. Edmundson.

ALWAYS ONE OF the feature events of the football season in the Middle West, the annual meeting of Notre Dame and Northwestern is of particular interest this year because the outcome will determine whether the Irish are to beat an old record or must be content with merely having equaled it.

That is, the longest winning streak in the history of Notre Dame. By defeating Indiana last Saturday, Hunk Anderson's charges tied that mark, and they will beat it if they can take Northwestern in today's battle at Chicago.

THE GREATEST DRIVE Notre Dame ever made was 20 straight victories, put over in the seasons of 1919, 1920 and 1921, following a scoreless tie with Nebraska in the final game of 1918.

Dick Hanley

The first two of those outfits were teams on which the great George Gipp played, and the third was named all-Western champion, though it lost, 10 to 7, to Iowa. It was this defeat that broke the long streak. Nine games were won in 1919, nine in 1920 and the first two in 1921.

BEFORE BEING STOPPED by Iowa in the third game of 1921, Notre Dame, in a little more than two seasons defeated Kalamazoo three times, Nebraska, Indiana, Purdue, Army and Michigan Aggies twice each, and Mt. Union, Western Normal, Morningside, Western State, Valparaiso, Northwestern and DePauw once each. The Irish have again won 20 games in a row, since their last defeat, 27 to 14, by Southern California in Los Angeles on December 8, 1928. Nine games were won in 1929, 10 in 1930 and one this year, the total of 20 victories being made up of three over Indiana, two each over Carnegie Tech, Army, Southern California, Navy, Northwestern and Drake, and one each over Pitt, Penn, Wisconsin, Georgia Tech and Southern Methodist. So Dick Hanley's Northwestern team is the last obstacle between the South Benders and a new record of 21 straight wins for their school. Northwestern has beaten Notre Dame only once in 11 meetings, winning on a safety, 2 to 0, in 1901. A scoreless tie was played in 1903, and the Irish were victorious in all of the nine other encounters.

By JESS CARVER

Favored by the odds, and with a superior record of past achievements behind them, the University of Pittsburgh's Panther are prepared to meet the formidable challenge of West Virginia's Mountaineers in the Pitt Stadium this afternoon. The contest is the second major test of the season for the locals and the third for the visitors.

During the long series of duels, which had its inception back in 1895, Pitt has won 17 games from West Virginia, tied one and been defeated eight times. The first Mountaineer triumph, an 8-0 affair, signalized the opening of gridiron relations between the two schools, and the most recent was recorded in 1928, 9-6.

NEALE IN CHARGE

The Mountaineers are piloted here this year by one of the nation's foremost mentors, Earl (Greasy) Neale, who has won 81 games, lost 31 and tied five in 13 years of coaching. Neale succeeded Ira Rodgers, himself a former Mountaineer star, as head coach, going to Morgantown from the University of Virginia after six years of successful coaching there.

So far this year, the Mountaineers have been beaten, more or less decisively, by Fordham; 20-6, and won over Duquesne in a stubborn battle, 14-6. The Panthers crushed Miami University, 61-0, and last week rode rough-shod over the University of Iowa varsity, 20-0.

Dr. John B. Sutherland, the Panther mentor, though he has been coaching two years less than Neale, has a better record. He's won 80 games, lost 20 and tied eight, for a percentage of .747. Neale's percent mark is .695.

The team that Neale has in town today is practically the same as the one Pitt turned back in Morgantown last fall. Greasy, however, has made many tactical changes in the Mountaineer play, rebuilt the backfield and made a change or two in the wall. It has been reported that Neale will start his team against the powerful Panthers today minus the services of Capt. Johnny Doyle the sterling left halfbacker and kicker. Doyle was pretty well used up in the game with Fordham last week, but I have just enough confidence in the ability of Trainer Art Smith to get a man into trim and know how much West Virginia needs Doyle, to feel certain that Capt. Johnny will be in there this afternoon.

MAY SHIFT LINEUP

Some shifts are rumored in the Mountaineer line, too. Sprouse and Sortet appear to be fixtures at the ends, but Ike Lewis, an erstwhile guard, may start at left tackle in the place of the bulky Beall. Schweitzer likely will be at right tackle. Anderson and either Leland Brown or Mazzie will be found at the guard positions, and the diminutive Schwartzwalder will be at center.

If Doyle starts, the backfield will be composed of Bill Parriott, who passes well with either hand, at quarter; Doyle and Jake Sebulsky at the halves and Leo Dotson at full. With Doyle on the splinters, Dotson may be moved to a halfback and Homer White, a 190-pounder, at fullback. Doyle will do the punting while he's in there, with Sebulsky booting 'em while Johnny rests.

Pitt's lineup will be the same as faced Miami and Iowa, except that Coach Sutherland has just about decided to use big Johnny Luch at fullback, thus giving little Jimmy Clark a rest.

The rush-line will have Capt. Eddie Hirshberg and Rip Collins at the ends; Jess Quatse and MacMurdo at the tackles; Mike Milligan and Hart Morris in at the guards, Daugherty at center and Hogan, Reider, Heller and Luch at fullback.

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: BLANK MONEY OF LIBERIA—Liberia, a republic in West Africa founded by liberated American Negro slaves, has come recently under the critical notice of the League of Nations, for it is one of the few countries in the world where the institution of slavery still flourishes. The country has had some amusing experiments with many branches of its system of government, but its most bizarre experiment has been of a fiscal nature. In 1904, when President Barclay came into office, it was decided to print an issue of paper currency. As the population was overwhelmingly illiterate, printing on the bank notes was dispensed with. Instead, the different denominations were distinguished by pictures of different domestic animals such as chickens, calves, pigs, etc.

SKIBOS MEET GEORGIA TECH

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 10.—Eighteen thousand fans were headed toward Grant Field today where at 2 o'clock Georgia Tech and Carnegie Tech will clash in the first intersectional game of the season on southern soil.

These two great institutions for the glorification of the slide rule and T-square pitted their football teams last year in Pittsburgh. The result was a resounding spanking for Georgia Tech, 31 to 0.

The plaid of Carnegie is favored by most critics to have an edge, but the flowing chance remains for the Yellow Jackets to rush out and snatch a victory by surprise as they did a week ago from South Carolina.

The Tartan squad arrived late last night and repaired to the Atlanta Biltmore. They had no chance to practice on the field and will not see it until game time. As was the case a week ago in the Carolina game, the Jackets will be outweighed in the line and backfield.

Georgia Tech's hope of winning lies in the possibility of Carnegie's tiring in the heat, if any. The Jackets are ready to use three full teams if necessary in the wearing down process. The probable lineup:

(This is the first of a series of articles by Pepper Martin, amazing hero of the world series. He will cover today's final game for tomorrow's issue and in later stories will tell the story of his career from the bushes to stardom in the world series.)

By JOHN (PEPPER) MARTIN
Outfielder for St. Louis Cardinals.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 10.—Folks, I am no hero, I am just a good ball player trying all the time. I didn't get into this series with the idea of busting any records or doing any sensational stuff. I've just been aiming to make all the hits and runs I can to help the Cardinals win—just like all the other boys have been doing.

But I've been luckier than the rest of them. They've been cracking that ball as hard as I have ,but where the whole difference comes in is that I'm banging them to the safe places. Gabby Street puts it up to me to do what I think best while at the plate or on the bases, but I always talk over things with him in advance of any game, just like the other boys do, and he "smarts" us up on what to do—or not to do—when the old critical moment gets around.

Pepper Martin

There was a sample of that in the ball game that we lost Friday. Gabby always lets me take a swing when the count is three balls and one strike, which is what some managers won't let their men do.

Yesterday, in the ninth, the count was 3 to 1 in my favor. It was up to me to do as I wanted, but I halted the game and ran over to Gabby and said:

"Want me to try to help the team and work for a pass, if I can get it, or should I take a crack at the next one and try for a hit?

"Use your own judgment," said Gabby.

TEAM PLAY COUNTS

I decided to get on base in any way that I could. The next throw was such a bad ball that I probably could not have reached it with a good swing. But I knew it was bad enough to make ball four, so I let it go by and got a pass. Sure, I wish it had been good so I could have taken a crack at it, and maybe smacked out a hit. But team play is first of all with us; the records we might make don't count. If I don't make 13 hits in this series and hang up a new record, I'll still be the guy that manufactured a dozen.

This fellow Bob Grove tamed me plenty today. He got square with me for bumping him around a bit in the other two games. He sure was blazing that ball down the alley at me, and he had plenty of stuff on it. He kept it in close most of the time, and I never could get a swing at it. That's smart work.

A lot of people are saying that

LEFTY CONCEALS PILL IN SMOKE

By NICK ALTROCK
Baseball's Funny Man.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 10.—The Cards didn't look so good in there yesterday. The St. Louis fans thought they were looking at the Browns.

Gabby used a third of a dozen pitchers to hold the fans. He might have shoved in the four Marx Brothers. It looks like Hallahan, the old oaken bucket, will have to go to the well today.

Nick Altrock

Before yesterday's game, Connie inspected Grove for blisters, hives, sunburn and eczema, and found him O. K. The Cards couldn't find him at all. Lefty had so much smoke on the ball, the Cards thought he was pitching hams.

Pepper Martin was present, but not voting. The best Pepper did today was wait for a base on balls.

Young Paul Derringer may have been the Cards' coolest pitcher all season, but they took him out of the ice box too soon for the series.

Well, today finishes it up anyway. Statistics on the series by far show I have traveled 3,000 miles, with another thousand to go, probably by freight.

I have eaten a half ton of hot dogs and written 40 reams of world series predictions, 90 per cent of which were wrong. I am still ahead of other experts, however, for most of them have been tions filled rapidly after the gates were opened. Even reserved seat ticket holders were among the early comers.

MACKS, CARDS ON EDGE FOR SERIES FINAL

St. Louis is in an uproar over the seventh and final game. The series has been one of the most remarkable in the annals of the sport, and it is believed the final Largely on account of the masterly pitching of Robert Moses (Lefty) Grove, the American League was able to stay in the fight after yesterday. The Mackian band had its back against the wall as it took on the somewhat confident home players. The Cardinals may not have noted it, but the mood of the invaders was ominous; they were a bit sullen and quiet as they went through their didoes, but once the battle was under way, the Cardinals realized they were fighting a desperate foeman.

As the battle wore on the Men of Street had a deeper realization of this fact and at the finish of the one-sided scrap the St. Louis flock were a bit flabbergasted. The Athletics showed no quarter at any moment and at the finish of the fight they left the field with an 8-to-1 victory.

The supporters of the home team feel that the trimming of yesterday will be just the right sort of tonic needed for the Redbirds as they go into action today. The holiday spirit will be off them, and they will have some of that "meanness" about them that was noted in their rivals of yesterday.

A'S IN GREAT SHAPE

The Athletics, however, are likely to be right in the pink for the grand struggle. They know they can set a new record in the winning of world series banners by copping the day's fight. A Mackian triumph today would record three emblems in succession. Moreover, there is the monetary consideration as well as the feeling of an artistic triumph surrounding such a feat. The players of the club winning today will cut the winners' share, which is considerably larger than the losing purse.

With the returns for the six games in, it is assured that the present series will be a $1,000,000 spectacle. The total is shy of that figure now, but another game's receipts will put the sum about $100,000 beyond the $1,000,000 referred to. Not so bad in view of the depression.

This will be the fifth $1,000,000 series in the history of the autumn classic.

Grove let the Cardinals down with five hits in the sixth game. Paul Derringer was a good match for the star lefthander until the fifth, when the A's broke a scoreless tie by scoring four runs.

ERROR HELPS MACKS

Umpire Nallin's ball ruling on a three-and-two pitch to George Haas, with the bases loaded, and two out, in the fifth opened the way for a three-run drive on the part of the American Leaguers. They scored a run previous to the disputed pitch one more went over on the called ball and two more were made before the Athletics were retired.

Wowel's high throw put Foxx on base at the start of the inning. Jake made a fine stop, but got off a bad throw. Miller sacrificed and Dykes walked. Williams singled to score a run. Grove fanned, but Bishop drew a pass that filled the bases. Haas walked, but the deciding pitch brought a stormy protest from the Cardinals. Dykes scored, and when Cochrane came through with a

BATTLES STARS AS BOBCATS BEAT DUKES

Yellow Jackets to Open 1931-32 Hockey Race Here November 12

WESLEYAN WINS, 12 TO 0; GENEVA COPS

A great halfback, Cliff Battles, and a scrappy center, Tubby Edmundson, threw a mantel of grief over Duquesne University's football hopes at Forbes Field last night as West Virginia Wesleyan defeated the local Irish, 12 to 0.

Scoring in the first and final periods and marching to the two-yard line in the second, the Bobcats secured ample revenge for the two-to-one touchdown defeat of a year ago and crashed the victors' column for the first time this year. Wesleyan outplayed the locals from start to finish. Battles keeping them with their backs to the wall with his fine punting and brilliant return of Duquesne kicks and Edmundson playing havoc with the Duke running attack.

The Dukes handicapped themselves by frequent fumbles and poor tackling and by some atrocious interfering and blocking.

'CATS SCORE EARLY

Wesleyan scored almost before the few spectators were fairly settled in their seats. The Cats kicked off and the Dukes had the ball on the 26-yard line. On the first play a drive through right tackle, Halfback Sepot fumbled and Edmundson fell on the ball on the Duquesne 32.

Battles drove through right tackle for four yards and then Paul (Beef) Beveridge, Bobcat fullback, tore through a gaping hole in the center of the line for 15 yards and repeated with a slam for four more and a first down on the Duke 10. On the first play Battles made monkeys of the Duquesne defense by chasing unmolested around right end for a touchdown. Art Bachtel's try for the extra point with a placement kick was wide.

Later in the period after Duquesne had made one of its two first downs of the first half when Trambley broke through for gains of 12 and four yards, Ed Rury in at center cut loose with a bum pass that cost the Duke 15 yards and placed them with the ball on their own seven-yard line. Zahanelli kicked out of danger temporarily.

In the second quarter a short kick by Zananelli gave Wesleyan the ball on the Duke's 38-yard line. Battles ripped a pass to Howard Bachtel, the quarterback, that was good for 22 yards and a first down on the Duquesne 13. He and Beveridge then hammered to the four, but lost the ball on downs and missed a chance to bang up a second touchdown in the half.

BEVERIDGE SCORES

The third period was another punting duel, Battles retaining the edge. He started the final quarter by picking his way through the Duke line for 13 yards and a first down on the Duquesne 44. He went to the 39 on the next try and then rifled a pip of a pass to Art Bachtel who made an astonishing catch over his left shoulder while on the dead run. The pass was good for 37 yards and a first down on the Duquesne three-yard stripe. Beveridge promptly plunged through left tackle for the score. This time the try for the extra point failed, because the Duquesne linemen broke through and forced Art Bachtel to run with the ball instead of kicking it.

The only threatening Duquesne offense was launched late in the final quarter. DeLucca standing on his own 25-yard line, tossed a pass to Chacko that netted 25 yards. Then he skipped around end for 24 and added four more on another try. Chacko went around left end for 12 and a first down on the 10-yard line, but the Wesleyan line braced and finally DeLucca hurled a pass over the goal line that Battles broke up without moving.

Both teams landed nine first downs. The game was fought in Duquesne territory for the most part, Duquesne getting into alien soil just five times. Duquesne used nine passes and completed four for a total of 76 yards. Battles hurled 10 and completed two gaining 59 yards, and had one intercepted. The lineup:

CONTRACT BRIDGE

Official System as Adopted By Leading Authorities

By E. V. SHEPARD

Bootleg Bidding Practiced In Some Card Clubs

I dare not blame the Eighteenth Amendment for the poisonous bootleg bidding sometimes found in even the best card clubs. I merely suggest that each club have an official card analyst to see that the official system goods only are admitted.

One of the most sound rules governing shifts to no-trumps is that some cards must be held of partner's suit, affording an opportunity for its ultimate establishment.

I bid only 1-club on the following hand, but when my partner jumped into 3-no trumps I announced game improbable at anything except clubs, by bidding just game—5-clubs.

♥ K-Q-7
♣ A-J-10-9-6-5-3
♦ 8-5-4

Instead of giving me a demand bid of 2-diamonds, my partner bid a game in no-trumps upon the following holding:

♠ K-Q-5-3
♥ A-J-10-6
♦ A-Q-9-7-3

Instead of allowing me to make just game at clubs, my partner next jumped me to 7-clubs. I had to lose two club tricks. The finesse in diamonds worked, while an opening lead of spades gave me one diamond discard upon a good spade after I had trumped the ace of that suit.

We could have made game at either diamonds or hearts, in addition to the 5-odd that I could have made at clubs.

The next hand was another decoction of paint remover that almost ruined the polish of my table manners. I made an opening bid of 4-hearts on this hand.

♥ A-K-Q-J-10-5-3-2
♣ 10-6
♦ 8-5

Such an opening bid trusts partner for two tricks; asking him not to increase the contract unless he hold not fewer than three lay-down tricks divided among at least two suits. And nothing except aces or aces accompanied by kings can be counted in such a situation. Here is the hand having only a single lay-down trick, upon which my partner jumped me to 6-hearts, with the remark: "Partner, I was afraid to bid seven without having another ace."

♠ K-Q-10
♥ 7-4
♣ K-Q-8-3
♦ A-9-5-2

An opening lead of diamonds swept away my chances for the establishment of a spade in dummy upon which I might secure a later discard of one loser. I could not avoid losing one trick in each side suit, going down just the two tricks that my energetic partner overbid.

After careful study I am fully convinced that players who are not adept at "feature showing" lose more points through bidding slams that fail than they would miss if they never bid more than game. But what fun they would lose!

THE EYES OF LOVE

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

There was a young woman who was very busy in a little home. But she took time off to brush her hair back from her forehead and behind her ears, to tuck her broom under her arm, and study with eager eyes the lovely, calm, beautiful blonde faces of girls that looked at her from magazines and papers. She saw them often, as we all do. They were idly, stilly, gracefully, glorifiedly beautiful. They had luminous, lazy eyes, and a beautiful jewel or two.

The young woman said low to herself, "I could be almost as beautiful if I wasn't in too big a hurry. My figure is alright—and John says my eyes are beautiful." (Remember that John has been mentioned. Upon him the story turns.)

If the young woman is one whose thought goes just so far and sits down there, that is to say, if she is not so wise a young woman as some others, she would say, "How can one win happiness with this wide difference between us?—how can a husband look at this lovely face, these lovely faces, bathed in happy hours like a flower in the sunshine, and not wish to flee from unmysterious me! I am very unhappy, and my heart feels like bursting!" But this young woman had a more subtle thought, that played about among truths and untruths, and pounced upon the truths; believed what her heart knew; remembered that she LOVED to watch young Ramon Novarro make knightly love on the screen, and all that that had to do with her own feelings was to remind her that she thought her own husband the handsomest and best of princes of men. (COMIC if you had seen John!)

So this young woman consoled herself. She said, "All the world loves and needs beauty, just beauty to look at. I, myself, and my husband, too. And when he goes to see it upon the stage he takes me, too."

She remembered that once when she longed for the flaming hair that she had seen being dried outside a window, and turned up her nose at her own quiet brown locks, John had said, "Striking hair is beautiful as part of the color scheme of the world. Exotic colors do widen one's eyes BUT, I like your soft brown hair the best to LIVE with. When I look at it close it has gold threads in it. I don't get tired of it, my dear."

Good John! Either a wise flatterer—or else this was a truth to be remembered gratefully.

So the wise young woman said to the beautiful, placid, angelic blonde in the magazine, "You have your place my dear and I have mine. You are something to all the world, and I am all the world to somebody. You give pleasure to all the public; but though my public is small, it is enthusiastic. You have a million hands to clap for you—and I have one great big one! And if I have any sense at all I will admire your picture along with John—holding his hand the while."

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Graduation Dance

Dear, Mrs. Beeckman:

1. How should a girl ask a boy to take her to a graduation dance if she has a bid?
2. Should a formal or informal dress be worn at a dinner dance?
3. When coming home late with a boy—too late to invite him in—what should you tell him?
4. Is it necessary to wear silver slippers at a semi-formal dance?
5. When arriving home with a boy, should a girl offer him her key if he doesn't ask for it?

GRADUATE.

1. She should write him a note of invitation, explaining to him that she has the tickets, and that she would like to have him accompany her.
2. A formal dress.
3. Just graciously extend your hand as you say goodnight.
4. No.
5. No. If he does not know that gallantry suggests that he take her key and unlock the door, I guess that she will have to do this herself.

Flowers for a Birthday

Dear Miss Beeckman:

I am a young man 24 years of age and have been very good friends with a young lady for the past three months. I would like to give her a little remembrance on her birthday, which is the latter part of next month. I was thinking about sending her a bouquet of her favorite flowers, and taking her to the theater and dinner afterwards. Kindly advise me if this would be the proper thing for me to do.

K.

This is a perfect plan for a birthday. I'm sure that this birthday will always have a glow over it in her memory. My best wishes for a happy time. I hope that you are having her favorite flowers made into a small corsage so that she can have the added joy of wearing them.

Graduation Gift

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have a very dear little friend graduating from high school this term, and I wish to give her a little present. Which is the best way to give any present—mail it, call on her personally, and present it, or how?

READER.

Send it to her from the shop in which you purchase it, enclosing your card. Or mail it to her.

TELL IT TO SALLY

By SALLY MARTIN

Some Questions Should Be Settled Before Marriage

Vivian has the Automobile Blues.

Does she like the Boy Friend's nice, new car?

Yes, indeed, she likes it very much.

But, unfortunately, the Boy Friend's folks like it, too.

Likes it so much that they want to be going places and doing things all the time—with the Boy Friend proudly driving them.

While Vivian sits in the back seat, or alone at home, wondering if she'll ever, ever have her George all to herself again.

Did you have that Extra Tire feeling yourself? Then you'll sympathize with poor little Viv. "Dear Sally:

"Please help me if you can. I am so worried. I don't know what to do about it all. George and I have been going together for over two years. We are engaged. He is very good to me, except for one thing. He is an only son, and lately he got a car. His mother has always seemed to like me, but, since he got the car, I hardly ever go out with just him alone, as I used to.

Practically every time we go out we have to go out with his parents or some of his relatives, whether I want to or not. I'm just not consulted. I'm not even told where we're going, or how late we'll be out, and it generally is late, which worries my own people, as they don't like me to be out late.

WOULD RATHER WALK

"I have tried to talk to George about it. The last time his answer was 'We were out two weeks ago by ourselves. What more do you want?' Sd it's still going on . . . never going anywhere without his mother or his mother and father, along. He doesn't want to hurt their feelings, he says, by not taking them. And what is still worse, I can't even sit with him in the front seat. No. I must sit in the back seat, with his mother and father. One of his cousins has noticed this, and even she thinks it is terrible.

"Don't think I don't like George's parents. I do. But do you think I am asking too much when I want to go out, say once a week, with just him?

"I feel that the car is to blame for it all, and I told him I'd rather walk if it would bring back the comradeship we used to have. But it only made him think I don't like his parents, which isn't true. I do like them, but I feel the 'clutch' of in-laws all around me, and I'm scared. If things are like this now, what will they be when we're married?

"And isn't a girl supposed to have anything to say about where she goes when she goes out? Am I being selfish? Please tell me, if you can, how to settle this thing. "VIVIAN."

ONE SERIOUS MATTER

Of course you're not being selfish, honey . . . but maybe you're being a bit blind about the other fellow's rights.

Remember, you've had George for two years. His Mom 'n' Dad have had him for over 20 years. Your two years were full of romance and adventure. Theirs wasn't. Many a dreary hour of work, many a hard sacrifice, went to George in those 20 years. And now, isn't it natural that they should want to play around, after the long pull is over?

Some day, when you're a middle-aged parent yourself, you too, will appreciate a little playtime with the youngsters you've slaved to raise—and, perhaps, you'll wonder why the girl who loves him should begrudge them to you.

But I know that isn't all there is to the picture. The thing that hurts is George's lack of consideration of you. Is he, or isn't he, always going to "put the folks first?" And you're right—that's serious. And you should certainly settle that matter before you marry. But you'll never settle it by quarreling, honey.

Be reasonable—and smart. Wait until the novelty of the new car wears off a bit, and George has gotten the show-off out of his system. Then have a talk with him. Tell him that you're marrying him—not his family—and every two weeks isn't enough to see him alone. Ask him what he's going to do about it, and make him come to a decision. For, unless he chooses to take his stand by you now, he never will Vivian. And though it may be a cruel wrench, you'd better discover that before marriage.

Junior Wins Battle With Hank

"That's Roderick," I gasped, as the childish shriek of pain and terror came to us. "Oh, what—"

I was on by feet with the words, rushing to the door. But Dicky was before me, even as his startled profanity had preceded my wail, and he thrust out his hand with a forbidding gesture.

"Stay here," he said emphatically. "I'll see to this."

But I did not obey him. There were other sounds coming from the room, which I had fixed up for Dicky's older nephews, sounds of boyish voices raised in lively controversy. With relief I noted that Roderick's was loudest, and that it was anger, not pain or fright, which was dominant in it.

"What d'ye mean," he shouted, "sticking that iron on me?"

"Of course, I meant to do it," Hank's voice would have been heavily sarcastic if it had not trembled so much.

"Sure, you did it on purpose," Roderick retorted. "You were so mad 'cause I said you had burned your pants."

"No, he didn't either, Rod." Junior's voice was judicial, and I caught my breath in relief from an awful fear which had possessed me, a fear which had its roots farther back than the coming of the lads to our home at Christmas time. Years ago I had surmised the cleverly concealed paroxysms of rage, finding vent in furtive cruelty, which had made it impossible to mourn the untimely death of the neurotic mother of these lads. With Roderick's accusation I had realized that subconsciously I had been watching all four of these children of Elizabeth Harrison, fearing that some one of them would show the indifference to pain in human beings or animals which marks the naturally cruel person.

I was at Dicky's elbow when he reached the door of the room, and was just in time to see Bill jump toward the pressing board and pick up the iron that had slid from the stand upon which Hank had set it, and was scorching a new place in the white flannel trousers that I saw at a glance could never be worn again.

"Snap off the switch," Dicky commanded, "and put the stand here on the floor. Now," as Bill obeyed, "what's all this rumpus about?"

The chorus rose instantly and insistently.

"He burned me with the iron, on purpose, 'cause I yelled. Lookit! Uncle Dicky!" Roderick thrust out his arm, upon which the red mark of a burn showed.

"I didn't either do it on purpose, you little——." Hank caught himself. "You got in the way when I snatched off the iron."

"You did, too, do it on purpose. You were mad as anything at me."

"No, he didn't, Rod." This was Junior. "He was mad at you all right, but—"

"What about it, Bill?" Dicky struck in imperatively. "You're the only one that isn't yelling."

But before Bill could answer, another imperative voice sounded behind us.

"What on earth is going on here?" Dicky's mother demanded. "Who is hurt? Roderick! Your arm is burned! What are you thinking of, Margaret, to let a burn go like that? Come to Granzie, Roderick."

"Don't want to," Roderick muttered sulkily, but his uncle put a firm hand on his shoulder and propelled him to the door.

"Go with your grandmother," he commanded. "Thank you, mother." He smiled at her engagingly. "That's the best thing you can do to help us."

With Roderick's hand in hers, she surveyed us witheringly, her desire for haste in first aid treatment in abeyance.

"That is your pressing drawings, I see," she said. "Letting inexperienced boys try anything like this, Margaret, I am surprised at your permitting it."

She swept away majestically and Dicky turned back to Bill.

"Well! Bill?"

"I didn't see it, sir," he said. "I was looking at my own pants, getting them ready to press when Hank should get through, and it all happened so quickly. But—I don't believe Hank did it on purpose, sir. He—he couldn't. That would be awful."

There was a horror in his voice that I understood. But there was also a hesitancy, and I saw his eyes go anxiously to his brother's face. Dicky's eyes flickered from one lad to the other, and finally settled upon the younger of the two.

"Tell me about it, Hank," he said soberly. "You know, don't you, that it would be pretty awful if you did do this on purpose, but it would be worse if you lied about it. Roderick says you did. Junior says you didn't. Let's hear your version."

But before Hank could speak, Junior flung himself in front of him and faced his father with blazing eyes.

"You're just the same as calling Hank a liar," he cried, "and that's not fair. He told you he didn't do it on purpose, and I told you. I saw the whole thing. Can't you believe us?"

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

To treat hollow cheeks, anoint with a heavy tissue cream; place fingers and thumbs outspread, and claw. This movement stimulates the blood streams in the trumpeter's muscles; they plump out.

Have you ever tried eau de cologne as a means for combatting an oily skin? Use after the sudsy facial scrubbing at night. In the morning dash on cold water until your face is about to freeze, then dry the skin, put on eau de cologne with cotton, tap dry with finger tips. Use a light powder. Heavy powders make the oil ducts mad, they spout.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Don't Touch Electrical Fixtures While Bathing

It is almost a daily experience to read of a sudden death, perhaps of one who has been electrocuted in the bathtub. The number of deaths from electricity every year runs well up into the thousands in North America.

Dr. Copeland

A committee created by the American Society of Safety Engineers has been organized to study this problem. These men have carefully investigated the cases that have been reported. They found that out of 100 such accidents, 31 occurred in the bath room.

Most of these occurred when the individual, whose body was wet, attempted to turn on an electric light. In this way he received an electric shock. Usually the power was 110 volts, but in many cases an even lower voltage was sufficient to cause instantaneous death.

Standing in water, the victim reaches for an electric switch or fixture. As a result of some defect, the contact is sufficient to send the current through the body.

The electric current has such intensity as to shock the heart so that its muscles are damaged. The muscles of the heart are sent into rapid vibration, preventing that organ from contracting and expanding.

When the skin is dry and only a small area of the body comes in contact with the low voltage wire, nothing of a serious nature can happen. It is only when the skin is wet, or if there is an open or moist cut or abrasion of the skin that the electricity will do harm.

Everyone should be warned to avoid any contact with electric wires or fixtures under these conditions. Please remember, when taking a bath, not to touch the light switch.

Another common danger is that attaching to portable electric heaters, curling irons or heating pads which are kept in the bathroom. It is exceedingly easy for one to electrocute himself by handling any of these appliances while in the bathtub or while the body is moist. Under such circumstances these contrivances are dangerous. They should be used only when the body is well clothed and dry.

Accidents may be caused, too, by handling other electric appliances while the hands are moist. While washing dishes, a housewife may receive a severe shock when reaching up with wet hands to adjust an electric fixture.

NO. 495.

AN ORDINANCE—Regulating the business of exterminating vermin by the use of certain gases, fumes or vapors, and providing penalties for the violation hereof.

SECTION 1. Be it ordained and enacted by the City of Pittsburgh, in Council assembled, and it is hereby ordained and enacted by the authority of the same. That no person, firm or corporation shall engage in the City of Pittsburgh in the business of exterminating vermin in any place used by human beings for habitation or business without first having received a license from the Department of Public Health.

SECTION 2. In the transaction of said business no person, firm or corporation shall use hydrocyanic acid, sulphuric or any other gases, fumes or vapors which are so dangerous to human beings when the same are used in concentrations necessary for effective fumigation, unless licensed to do so under the provisions of this Ordinance, and no person, firm or corporation shall sell or give away to anyone except a licensee under this Ordinance, for the purpose of fumigating the premises as provided in the first section hereof, any material containing hydrocyanic acid or sulphurous or any other gases, fumes or vapors which are so dangerous to human beings as to constitute a hazard to public health, as hereinbefore provided, unless a signed statement is first obtained from the purchaser of said material that it will not be used for the purpose of fumigating any building or portion thereof as provided in the first section hereof.

SECTION 3. Any person, firm or corporation desiring to engage in the business of exterminating vermin and household insects, rats or other pests shall first procure a license from the Department of Public Health by making a written application for the same. Such application shall be in the form of an affidavit giving the experience and training tending to qualify the applicant for the business of fumigating with dangerous gases. In the case of corporations said statement shall cover the training and experience of the executive officers or those delegated by the corporation to do the work.

SECTION 4. The Director of the Department of Public Health is hereby authorized to appoint a sufficient number of examiners, who shall have training and experience in the particular subject matter, and who shall make a thorough investigation of the training, experience, qualifications, character and reputation of the applicants for said license, and such examination shall be such as the Board deems necessary to determine the fitness and reliability of the applicant, and his knowledge of the requirements of this Ordinance, the Rules and regulations of the Department of Public Health relating thereto. In the case of a corporation, the executive officers of said corporation shall designate what agents shall supervise and control its fumigating work, which agents shall qualify and be examined as hereinbefore provided herein, by said Board. If the Board approves the issuance of a license to any person, firm or corporation, the Director of the Department of Public Health may issue said license if in his opinion the applicant is competent and qualified to engage in said business.

SECTION 5. Each licensee shall pay to the City Treasurer for said license the sum of fifty dollars ($50.00) per annum, and in addition thereto shall execute and deliver to the City of Pittsburgh, for the benefit of any person or persons who may receive injuries arising from or by reason of death by reason of the use of such gases, fumes or vapors, a bond in the sum of ten thousand ($10,000.00) dollars, said bond to be either a surety company bond or to be secured by adequate real estate in the name of the surety.

SECTION 6. Only those persons who are properly qualified by training or experience in the fumigants they are to use and who are in good health shall be employed by the licensee to do the actual work of fumigating. The licensee shall notify the Director of the Department of Public Health of each and every fumigator employed such notice to contain a statement of his qualifications. Such application shall be approved by the Director of the Department of Public Health before the person shall be permitted to do the work.

SECTION 7. Any person, firm or corporation desiring to fumigate with the gases, fumes or vapors referred to in Section 2 hereof during or shall file with the Director of the Department of Health an application giving the location of the building, enclosed space or ship, and shall receive from the said Director a permit, which shall state the day and hour when the work shall be performed. Each application for such permit shall be accompanied by a fee of two dollars ($2.00). Such permit shall be kept on the premises to be fumigated. Should the applicant be unable to perform the work on the hour and day set forth in the permit and notifies the Director of the Department of Public Health twenty-four (24) hours prior to the time set forth in the permit then, in the discretion of the said Director the time of the permit may be extended. A ship or vessel may be fumigated without previously procuring from said Director a permit to do so if every person except the watchman shall leave the vessel for the period of fumigation and the vessel shall be fended off from the shore so that no person may board the vessel without the knowledge of the watchman. In the case of special fumigation chambers or vaults a permit for each fumigation is required, but the local construction and means of ventilation of such vaults or chambers must be approved by the Director of the Department of Public Health. An annual permit for the operation of special fumigation chambers or vaults shall be procured from the Director of the Department of Public Health.

SECTION 8. Fumigation Procedure. When gases, fumes or vapors referred to in Section 2 hereof are used for fumigation or extermination, the following method of procedure shall be used:

(a) Notifications of occupants and vacating of premises. Before fumigation the operator shall personally inspect the premises, and shall serve notice, over his signature, upon all responsible occupants of each room or apartment within the danger area, stating the danger of the process and the precautions to be observed, designating the rooms or apartments which must be vacated and forbidding the same when the gas is to be generated or liberated. The form of this notice shall be approved by the Director of the Department of Public Health. Every room in the danger area shall be vacated. In the case of a building in which there is an inner court, vent shaft or light well, or a lot line court with a party wall, or in the case of two buildings having adjacent lot line courts upon which any room being gassed opens, every room with windows or other apertures opening to such inner or lot line courts, vent shafts or light wells shall be vacated and securely locked. Where the walls of any adjoining buildings are located within ten (10) feet of the roofs or apartments being gassed, the operator shall notify, over his signature, all responsible occupants of rooms or apartments with windows openings in such walls that such windows as are directly opposite from the area of the adjoining building which is under gas or fumes, or the room having gassed is being flushed or aired. All rooms or apartments ordered vacated but not under gas shall be well ventilated during the process of fumigating, the windows of rooms or apartments open.

Provided, however that such vacation of premises and notification of occupants shall not be necessary where the fumigation is done in special rooms or vaults when such special rooms or vaults are approved by the Director of the Department of Health, and a provision is made for the airing of such vaults so as to allow the escape of gases at such a location where it is not objected to by a system of ducts and ventilation approved by the Director of Health.

(b) The danger area. The danger area is those portions of any structure or dwelling which be within the boundary of the outside walls of the building under gas, the roof and the basement or cellar floor and such portion which walls as may exist in the structure in question. Such cut-off or fire walls shall be of solid masonry, gas tight, at least eight inches in thickness, extending from the basement through attic, with all openings locked and guarded against entry, and effectively sealed against gas leakage.

(c) Crew to be removed from vessel. No vessel shall be fumigated until the officials and other commanding officer shall have mustered the crew and caused the members thereof and all other persons therein or thereon to leave and remain away from such vessel during the process of fumigation. Provided, however where a part of a vessel is to be fumigated and such part is not occupied or immediately adjoining an occupied portion of the vessel, and where, after an investigation conducted by the Director of the Department of Public Health it appears to the said Director of the Department of Public Health that such portion may be fumigated without danger to life or health, he may, in his discretion, grant permission to the holder of a permit to perform fumigation without requiring all persons in other parts of such vessel to leave the same, subject to such conditions and restrictions as he may impose.

(d) Sealing rooms before releasing hydrocyanic acid gas. Before fumigation with hydrocyanic acid gas and any other dangerous gases, fumes or vapors it is required that the operator shall securely seal all cracks, holes, crevices, openings and apertures to walls, ceilings and floors in such a manner as to confine the gas to the premises intended to be fumigated.

(e) Locking rooms and admitting rooms and apartments. Before fumigation it is required that the operator shall personally inspect all rooms or apartments ordered vacated under Section 8 aforesaid, and be assured that they are unoccupied by persons or domestic animals, afterwards all doors to all rooms or apartments except the one each door of the room or apartment to be gassed shall be securely locked, in addition such windows or other wall openings as might possibly be used to gain entrance shall be locked or barred in such a way as to prevent entrance while still permitting thorough airing of the room. Immediately upon generating or liberating the gas the door through which the operator leaves shall be securely locked and sealed and all keys obtainable to all rooms or apartments ordered vacated shall be retained by the operator until all danger is passed. As an additional precaution all rooms and apartments vacated shall be placarded.

(f) Warning Card. Prior to releasing the gas suitable warning signs shall be posted on all entrances or doors to the premises to be fumigated and upon all passageways, ladders and other approaches, etc., from the deck, pier or land to the vessel as follows:

DANGER Skull and Crossbones
Fumigating with Hydrocyanic Gas and Crossbones
Death Poison

All persons are warned to keep away.

By order of the City Health Director
(Name and address of licensee as well as telephone number).

Such signs shall be printed in red ink on white cardboard. The letters in the word DANGER shall be at least two inches deep and all others except the signature at least three-fourth of an inch high. At night such signs shall be illuminated so as to make the reading matter thereon plainly legible.

(g) Guards. Whenever hydrocyanic acid and/or other dangerous gases, fumes or vapors as provided in Section 2 are generated or liberated in any room, house or structure the City of Pittsburg a sufficient number of capable alert watchmen shall remain on duty at the entrances or entrances to the room, building or enclosed space vacated and gassed so as to prevent persons entering while gas is present and for two hours after the room or area gassed is cleared for airing. All guards or watchmen shall be reliable persons and must be acceptable as a result of examination by the Department of Public Health. The licensee shall be held strictly responsible and accountable for the conduct of the guards or watchmen in every way where the entire building is not vacated the licensee or his approved representative shall remain on the job during the fumigation and airing and shall constantly supervise the occupancy of the structure to insure that no person will be endangered by gas leakage. The licensee shall give all guards definite and proper instructions and shall visit the premises being fumigated at regular and frequent intervals during the process to insure that they are properly guarded.

(h) Removal of placards. Before fumigation the operator shall see that all ice, food and drink are removed from the rooms ordered vacated, except such food or drink as is in sound air-tight containers need not be removed. Provided that completely dry foods, such as flour and cereals when stored in elevators, warehouses or mills need not be removed when the fumigation is for the purpose of destroying vermin or insects infesting or liable to infest these foodstuffs.

(i) Fire. All fires within the premises under gas shall be put out wherever an inflammable gas is used. For the purpose of this Ordinance the Director of the Department of Public Health shall designate upon request whether the gas to be used shall be regarded as flammable or nonflammable. The licensee shall notify the Fire Bureau of any rooms, building or structure or other gas appointed vaults placed under hydrocyanic acid or other dangerous gas fumigation.

(j) Spilling of cyanide. No cyanide crystals shall be dropped on the floor or left exposed where moisture or any ammonia may come in contact with them.

(k) Container for ingredients. An impermeable receptacle for containing the ingredients is required.

(l) Opening rooms after gassing. At the conclusion of the gassing process it shall be the duty of the operator to throw open doors and windows of the premises and all rooms have been opened for free circulation of air, no person, except the operator or operators, shall be permitted to enter the premises until all traces of the gas have disappeared, and in no case shall the occupants of the rooms or areas gassed be permitted to enter until twelve hours after airing. The operator or watchman shall keep all persons away from the doors and windows of the premises for two hours after airing. Tests and examinations under this part of law shall not be permitted to re-enter the premises until eighteen hours after the rooms or apartments are opened for airing. The licensee shall inform all occupants having rooms in the premises in writing over his signature. Warnings posted where the natural light between sunrise and sunset is dim shall be artificially illuminated. Warnings so posted to be posted after sunset shall be artificially illuminated in a manner approved by the Director of the Department of Public Health.

(m) The operator shall pour the residue left in the jars or containers and the water used for cleaning such jars or containers down the toilet bowl which shall be flushed thoroughly with water to remove all traces of the chemicals.

(n) Every container in which hydrocyanic acid, either alone, mixed with or absorbed in other material, is handled, shipped or used shall be of a type or construction approved by the Department of Public Health in order that accidental poisonings during handling, storage and shipment of such containers may be prevented. The approval necessary in cases where the containers are accepted by the United States officials for interstate shipment.

(o) The Director of the Department of Public Health is hereby authorized and directed to prescribe and enforce such rules and regulations not in conflict with the provisions of this Ordinance as he may deem necessary for the protection of life and public health.

(p) The Director of the Department of Public Health may prescribe that a warning agent of some character that odors, irritants or vapors to be used for fumigating, specifying in whatever detail he shall deem necessary the time and method for the generation or release of such gases. The Director of the Department of Public Health further authorized to prescribe from time to time changes or additions in the rules and regulations promulgated by him under this Ordinance as may be deemed by him to be necessary.

SECTION 9. Any person, firm or corporation violating any of the provisions of this ordinance shall, upon conviction thereof before any police magistrate of the City of Pittsburgh be fined not more than one hundred dollars ($100.00) which shall be recoverable with costs and upon failure to pay the same shall be imprisoned in the City Workhouse for a term not exceeding thirty (30) days.

Sport Vignettes

Only two more days and Jack Sharkey will turn in his latest attempt against Primo Carnera in Brooklyn. Thus will they desecrate Columbus Day. Monk Dugrote, former Auburn backfield star who played for the Cleveland Naval Reserves in the game that ended Pitt's long winning streak back in 1919, will referee the Carnegie Tech-Georgia Tech game at Atlanta today. They're betting 5 to 3 in Dixie on the Golden Tornado to get even for that 21-0 defeat of last year at the Stadium. That's a smart move on the part of Coach Bill Alexander of W. & J. moving Bliss Wilson to quarterback to make room for Dracle at fullback. This Dracle fellow can break a line.

Princeton now is digging underground for star football talent, if we are to believe the headlines, which say: "Wittmer Unearths Fine Pair of Backs."

Notre Dame has won nine games, lost one and tied one in its football series with Northwestern University, which it meets in that titanic test in Chicago today, the series dating back to 1889. The tie was a scoreless affair in 1903, after which the teams did not meet again until 1926.

On October 16, 1906, Honey Mellody wrested the world welterweight ring championship from Joe Walcott in a 15-round battle in Boston. On October 23, exactly one week following the twenty-fifth anniversary of that fight, Lou Brouillard, Boston southpaw, will essay to take the same laurels from another Negro fighter, Young Jack Thompson, in a 15-rounder in the same city. Brouillard has had a meteoric rise. He broke in as a $75 preliminary boy in March 1928 and in November of the same year dragged down a $12,000 purse for a 10-round bout with Tony Canzoneri. Since then he has been a consistent winner against all manner of opposition. It is said Thompson is getting a guarantee of $40,000 for risking his title while Brouillard is going in there for $1,000 and a chance to cop the crown.

Did you know that Pepper Martin swiped only 17 bases during the entire National League season and yet pilfered four and almost a fifth in the first five games of the world series? They say his weakness at the plate is low ball pitching and the A's pitchers were shooting them at him waist high until yesterday, when Lefty Grove stopped him. They call Missouri the Show Me State but the Cards showed more in Philly than they did at home. A lot of folks are squirrels sorry to see Jewel Ens go as manager of the Pirates and hope he catches on elsewhere to good advantage.

ALFRED HARRIERS WIN

ALFRED, N. Y., Oct. 10 (AP).—Alfred University annually won the 4.8-5 mile cross country race here, defeating Hobart, 21-35.

CONFAB SLATED AT FIELD CLUB

By VERN SWARTSFAGER

The annual meeting of the Pittsburgh Field Club is to be held tonight at 8 o'clock in its clubhouse near Aspinwall. Five directors are to be elected and reports of committees heard. The following gentlemen have been nominated for directors: John F. McGraw, W. J. McCallister, J. N. Succop, John W. Carr, now secretary-treasurer, and Dr. J. H. McCready.

Yesterday Pat McDonough, erstwhile city champion, scored his third hole in one on the 248-yard eleventh hole, playing with J. W. Platt Thomas, Barr and Art Fisher. He shared his first in 1923 and his second in 1929.

H. G. Olsen, a professional golfer, won the Helping Hand tourney, which ended over the South Park county links yesterday by defeating 16-year-old Norman Grant, 7 and 6, in the 18-hole final.

Director of County Parks Riis will turn the clothing procured as entry fees over to committees in Curry, Coverdale, Horning and Library for distribution. Professional A. McBride reported about 50 ... to 25 overcoats and 50 pairs of shoes, with sundry other ... had been donated.

A team match between players of North and South parks will be held during the week of October ... for the women's ... Edison ...

DATTO ARRIVES TOMORROW

Johnny Datto, Filipino featherweight boxer, of Cleveland, who meets Mose Butch, local southpaw, in the 10-round main bout at Motor Square Garden Monday night, will arrive in town tomorrow morning and indulge in his final workout here. It is likely he will need the drill to keep down his poundage and he will have to ... out to make the limit of 123 pounds called for by the articles.

Butch ends his hard training today. The weight is easy for him, and he is counting upon having an edge on his opponent in this respect, as he will be at his full strength, while Datto may have to leave some of his fight in the gymnasium.

Joey Spiegel of Uniontown, and Billy Holt, of Homewood, box the eight-round semi-final. Holt is a good right-hand puncher and may prove just the type of opponent to take the measure of Spiegel, a southpaw.

Between Rounds

Bernard Reilly, Jr., of McKeesport, is the new matchmaker at both the Morgan Square and Fairmont clubs in West Virginia. He will stage his opening show at Fairmont on October 21.

Lonnie Beasley, of Cincinnati, and Joe Kahara, Erie, Pa., middleweights, are ... and will ... the ... night ... a ... at East Liverpool, O. Monday night. Beasley and Tommy McKeagy are in the semi-final.

SCRANTON, Pa., Oct. 10 (AP).—St. Thomas Institute, a rival of St. Francis College eleven from Loretto, Pa., to a score less tie last night in a game that was colored by successive series of forward passes on the part of both squads.

RED WINGS KEEP SERIES TITLE

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Oct. 10—(AP)—For the second consecutive year, the Rochester Red Wings, champions of the International League, rule minor league baseball.

The Red Wings retained their position on the throne yesterday when they buried the St. Paul Saints, American Association representatives, under a 9-to-3 score for their fifth victory in eight games.

St. Vincent Eleven Leaves for Olean

LATROBE, Pa., Oct. 10—The St. Vincent Bearcats left this morning by bus for Olean, N. Y., where they will take on the powerful rival St. Bonaventure, tomorrow at Bradhurst Stadium.

Coach Crowe with a squad of 25 men ready and eager for the fray, was optimistic over the Bearcats chances this morning, and told the fans not to be surprised if they come through in style against their opponents.

Soldiers Pay Visit to Friend In Insane Asylum

CHAPTER XXVII.

During the afternoon Albert and Ludwig call for me. We want to see how things are going with our old schoolmate, Giesecke. On the way we meet George Rahe, who accompanies us, as he also was a friend of Giesecke.

The day is clear and from the hilltop where the building stands one can see far out across the fields to where the lunatics in their blue-and-white striped jackets are at work in gangs under the supervision of uniformed warders. From a window in the right wing of the building we hear a voice singing "On the Lovely Banks of Saale . . ." That will be a patient. It sounds strangely from a window with iron bars: "And the clouds go sailing by—"

Giesecke is lodged in a large room with several other patients. As we enter one cries out shrilly: "Cover!—Cover!" and crawls under the table; but the others take no notice of him. Giesecke comes at once to meet us. He has a narrow, yellow face; with his sharp chin and prominent ears, he looks much younger than he used to. Only his eyes are restless and old.

Before we can greet him someone else buttonholes us. "Anything new out there?" he asks.

"New, no nothing new," I reply.

"And what about the Front? Have we got Verdun yet?"

We look at each other—"But it's peace long ago," says Albert reassuringly.

NIGHTS OF TERROR

The man laughs, an unpleasant, bleating laughter. "Don't you kid yourself. They're only trying to fool you. They're just waiting for us to come out, and then tara, before you know where they are, they've nabbed you and you're back up the line." And he adds slyly: "But they won't catch me again!"

Giesecke shakes hands with us. This rather takes us aback; we imagined he would be hopping about like a monkey and raving and pulling faces, or at any rate shivering all the time, like the shakers at the street corners. But instead he only smiles at us with a wry, poor mouth, saying: "Didn't expect it to be like this, eh?"

"But you're quite fit!" I protest. "What's up with you, then?"

He passes his hand over his brow. "Headaches. Feels like a sort of steel band around the back of my head. And then Fleury—"

He was buried during the fighting at Fleury, and for several hours he lay with another fellow, his face clamped by a beam against the other man's body which was ripped open up as far as the belly. The other had his head free and kept crying out again and again, and each time he yelled a stream of blood would well out over Giesecke's face.

He tells us this quite clearly and consequently. "And now every night it comes again, and I suffocate, and the room is full of slimy white snakes and of blood."

"But when you know what it is, can't you fight against it?" asks Albert.

Giesecke shakes his head. "It's no good, even though I may be wide awake. As soon as it gets dark, they are there." He shudders. "You don't see them, but I see them. I jumped out of a window at home and broke my leg. Then they brought me here."

"But how about you? What are you doing now?" asks Giesecke. "Had your exams yet?"

"Soon," says Ludwig.

"I suppose that's all over for me," says Giesecke sadly. "They wouldn't let a chap like me loose among children!"

The man who had cried "Cover" as we entered, now sneaks up behind Albert and digs him in the back of the neck. Albert swings around, but he remembers in time. "A. I." sniggers the man, "A. I.," and he roars with laughter. Then suddenly he is solemn again and goes softly into a corner.

"Couldn't you write to the major?" asks Giesecke.

"What major?" I ask mystified. Ludwig gives me a prod. "What should we say to him?" I add hastily.

"Tell him he should let me go back to Fleury again," answers Giesecke excitedly. "That would help me; I'm sure it would. It is all quiet there now; but I only know it as it was then, when everything was going up—you see, I'd go down by Death Valley, past Cold Earth, and so to Fleury; and not a shot would fall and everything would be over. Then, I believe, I couldn't help but get peace and quiet again. Don't you think so yourself, too?"

"It will pass all right, anyway," says Ludwig, putting his hand on Giesecke's arm. "You've only to make it all perfectly clear to yourself."

LOSES INTEREST

Giesecke stares ahead gloomily. "But you will write to the major? Gerhard Giesecke, that's my name, spelled with ck." His eyes are fixed and blind.

We promise him everything, but he hears us no longer; he has suddenly lost all interest. As we go, he stands up and clicks his heels to Ludwig. Then with vacant eyes he sits down again at the table.

At the door I look toward him once again. He jumps up suddenly as if he had just waked and runs after us. "Take me with you," he says in a queer, high-pitched voice. "They are coming again." He huddles against us in terror. We don't know quite what to do. But then the doctor comes in, and seeing us, puts a hand cautiously on Giesecke's shoulder. "Now we'll go into the garden," he says to him gently. And submissively Giesecke allows himself to be led away.

Outside the evening sun lies over the fields. From the barred window the voice sounds singing still—"The castles are in ruin—but the clouds—go sailing by—"

We walk out in silence, side by side. There is a splendor on the furrowed fields. Slender and pale, the sickle moon hangs among the branches of the trees.

"I believe," says Ludwig after a while, "I believe we all have a touch of it."

I look at him. His face is lit with the glow of sunset. He is solemn and pensive. I am about to answer, but a light shudder suddenly creeps over my skin—whence I know not, nor why.

"Let's not talk of it," says Albert.

We go on. The sunset fades and twilight begins. The crescent moon shows clearer. The night wind blows up from the fields and in the windows of the houses first lights are appearing. We re-enter the town.

George Rahe has not said a word the whole way. Not until we stop to take leave of each other does he appear to waken out of his thoughts. "Did you hear what he wanted?" he says. "To go to Fleury—back to Fleury—"

Synopsis

Ernst, who enlisted when a school boy, tells the post-war story of a group of friends from the same city who march home when peace is made, finding a strange, puzzled world to which they seem maladjusted. Ernst, like the rest, is troubled by the problems life presents. His family seem like strangers, life itself seems unreal. In an attempt to orient himself he walks out into the country where he meets George Rahe, and the two lose themselves in talk. Later school, interrupted by the war, begins again and the friends—or those who have survived—attend. The roll call brings home to them the gaps in their ranks. Some are dead, others in hospitals. Gieseke is in an asylum for the insane.

DAILY SHORT STORY

No Background

(All names of characters in this story are fictitious.)

Former Circus Star Rescues Baby From Fire

"She is pretty enough—but then she has no background."

It was Mrs. Vanderson speaking. She was entertaining the Greysons at her exclusive little summer place, "The Towers."

Just why Mrs. Vanderson called her place the "Towers" did not appear, because there was only one tower, a high structure used as a lookout for the view down the beautiful valley.

Mrs. Greyson watched the young lady as she walked down the shady little country road.

"At least," she said, "she carries herself well. Really you seldom see a girl these days able to walk with such grace. She reminds me, in a way, of some of those old-world peasant girls who walk gracefully because they so frequently carry heavy loads on their heads."

The girl disappeared through a vine-covered gateway and went up a flower-bordered path to a tiny cottage, unpainted and gray with age.

"Well, there you are," Mrs. Vanderson said, "that proves my statement about the young person—she had no background. No doubt she is descended from some European peasant family."

Mrs. Greyson smiled.

The Greysons had possessed wealth and social position for many generations back—in fact, they possessed an enviable family tree. The Vandersons, as Mrs. Greyson well knew, dated their wealth back to but one generation.

"You see," Mrs. Vanderson went on, "Mortimer became rather interested in that young person, so I looked her up—that is, I had Hepson do it."

YOUNGEST SON

"Hepson? The man who digs into your genealogy and supplies family crests if you don't chance to have one?"

Mrs. Vanderson flushed.

"I don't know about that," she said sharply, "We never were silly enough to go in for that. Hepson told me that the Davegas were a family of honest, hard-working people but people with no background."

"Davegas?"

"That girl is a Miss Winona Davega. It seems that her people were sort of traveling mountebanks or whatever they call these small circus people from foreign countries."

"How very interesting!" Mrs. Greyson declared.

"So you see," Mrs. Vanderson went on, "I couldn't permit my Mortimer to become interested in such a person—a girl of absolutely no background!"

"Indeed," was all the comment that Mrs. Greyson made.

Mortimer Vanderson was Mrs. Vanderson's younger son. There was Peter Vanderson, II, her other son. He was married and there was a little "Peter III."

"Did—er—Mortimer become very much involved with this Davega girl?" Mrs. Greyson asked.

HIGH IDEALS

"Oh, my dear—certainly not involved. Mortimer is a thorough gentleman. He wouldn't—er—"

Mrs. Vanderson hesitated.

There was quite a din at the far end of the veranda and Mr. Peter Vanderson came romping along with little Peter, III, his grandson.

"Peter is simply crazy about little Peter," Mrs. Vanderson whispered. "I never saw a man so bound up in a grandchild."

"I don't blame him," Mrs. Greyson answered.

"But he seems so—er—boisterous, so sort of vulgar in his antics—he actually rides the child on his back and I've seen him standing on his head to amuse baby, right on the lawn! Imagine the Honorable Peter Vanderson standing on his head and waving his feet while watches and coins and whatnot ran out of his pockets."

"If I had a grandson," Mrs. Greyson murmured, "I believe I would stand on my head myself!"

As for Mortimer Vanderson, his mother had extremely high ideals for him. She saw no reason why, since American girls married foreigners who were more or less noblemen, that her Mortimer could not marry some titled foreign girl.

Mortimer's ideal was Winona Davega.

At that very moment he was coming along the river bank at the back of Winona's cottage. He cut across to her little orchard and found her swinging idly in a hammock.

"Mort," she said, "I'm ashamed of you!"

The expression in her eyes belied this. The truth was this unknown little Miss Winona Davega adored Mortimer Vanderson and at the same time she was deeply hurt over the fact that Mortimer's mother did not approve of her. She had suspected it and made Mortimer confess.

"You should be proud of me, Win!" he replied, sitting on the edge of the hammock and tugging at one of her blonde curls.

"Proud of you?"

"Certainly—proud of me for daring to hope that you will always love me—and that we'll be married."

"I suppose your mother will be over soon and beg me to marry you."

"Honey!" Mortimer said, reprochfully.

"Well?"

He leaned down and kissed her.

"It will be 'well' before long, you'll see."

"But Mort—you aren't very well equipped to support a home and frivolous little wife like me?"

"I'm secretary in father's construction company. We could live on what I get—ten thousand a year."

"Isn't it a sort of honorary position? Isn't there some hard working chap who does all the real work?"

"I do some work—mother wants me to travel with her," Mort explained, lamely.

"When your mother welcomes me to your home, Mort, I'll marry you—honestly, dear."

Mortimer's face clouded, and Winona saw it.

"It will be all right. I'll make it all right," he said stubbornly.

REFUSES TO OBEY

His mother's sharp eyes saw this. She was still chatting with Mrs. Greyson. She became quite grim and hoped that Mrs. Greyson had not noticed this. But she did, and it amused her.

As soon as Mrs. Vanderson could have a session with Mortimer, which was the next day, after Mrs. Greyson had gone, she let loose in no uncertain manner.

"Don't go near that Davega girl—she's a nobody, she absolutely has no background. I forbid it!" she scolded.

"She is a wonderful girl and I'm sick of being bossed around. I'm 25 and—"

Mrs. Vanderson called for her husband. And he, fearing his wife a great deal, told Mortimer where he "got off." He was to obey his mother.

"The hell I will," Mortimer shouted, and stalked out.

He went over and visited Winona. Then he went up to Jack Clayton's camp for a few days, knowing that his mother would send for him.

It was Saturday that the Vandersons went to the village, some three miles away, leaving little Peter with his nurse. The nurse left Peter asleep and went down to the river to steal a canoe ride with Jonesey, the gardener. They were to be married in the fall.

It was Winona Davega who saw smoke coming from the Vanderson place about an hour later. Little Peter's nurse and her Jonesey were far down river in a canoe. By the time that Winona got over to the Vanderson place to investigate, she had the fright of her life. The house, below, was a mass of flames. Little Peter was on the balcony crying because of the smoke. It was a high balcony with no way to reach it. Winona dashed into the observation tower, cut down the long bell rope, went to the top, doubled the rope around an ornamental protruding beam and swung down and across for the balcony just as the Vandersons returned.

MOTHER CONSENTS

Winona clutched at the balcony rail and missed, swung back, made a second try and landed. She pulled away the rope and ma[illegible] it fast, coming down this w[illegible] little Peter. Then she rol[illegible] him in the grass, and ro[illegible]d along with him as their cl[illegible]hes had caught fire from sparks.

Little Peter's mother had fainted. His gra[illegible]mother collapsed, but rema[illegible]ed conscious and stared. The[illegible]en had run about in a futile [illegible]ort to find ladders.

Winona had the [illegible]other and the grandmother c[illegible]e to her cottage with Peter [illegible].

The men followed [illegible] soon as the house had become [illegible] mass of ruins. Mortimer, not knowing that anything had [illegible]ppened, came down the river [illegible]gth his chum and ran into [illegible]nona's cottage from the rear.

"But however did you [illegible]o it?" Mort's father was asking, as he sat trembling, holding little Peter.

"Why, you see," Winona said, staring straight at Mortimer's mother, "I was brought up in a circus. All of my people were circus people and I used to be a trapeze performer!"

"That makes no difference," Mortimer shouted, "I'm going to marry her!"

"You bet you are, if she will have you!" his father shouted, glaring at his wife.

Mrs. Vanderson went over and kissed Winona.

"My dear," she said, "of course—and think of it, a trapeze performer in our family! What a background you have!"

Well Done, Mr. Park!

The District Attorney Is Doing Great Work in Investigating Election Frauds.

The indictment of officials of the Board for the Assessment and Revision of Tax marks a new high point in the warfare against election frauds. It is a real pleasure to commend District Attorney Andrew T. Park for the great work he has done in investigating the crookedness, and the fearlessness he has shown in following the trail to the "higher ups."

The citizens gained another encouraging victory yesterday in the rejection by the Return Board of the vote from the Fourth District of Wilmerding, where the rankest kind of fraud was discovered. This box was thrown out by order of Judges George V. Moore and Elder W. Marshall, who have consistently ruled in favor of decency and honesty in the election cases they have handled.

The Tax Board has been the fountain head of all the election cheating. The laxness of Chairman Schad, Secretary McBride and their associates in permitting the assessment of phantoms has been inexcusable. Regardless of the outcome of the indictment they should be dismissed, and it is a satisfaction to know that under the new County Commissioners they will be.

Under the next administration there will be, of course, a wholesale weeding out of Joseph G. Armstrong's followers on the county payroll. The dismissal of those who are incompetent and of those who have placed the interests of the Armstrong machine above the welfare of the people is much to be desired. But we hope and believe that others will be allowed to retain their jobs.

Clerks, laborers and other county employes whose efficiency and honesty is unquestioned are said to be apprehensive that they will lose their positions, Armstrong told them they would be discharged if he failed of re-election. It would be a gracious thing for Col. McGovern and Senator Mansfield to say something that would reassure these men and their families.

*Allegheny County should have a civil service sys-*tem that would do away with the possibility of the re-establishment of the spoils system. The next Board of County Commissioners no doubt will relieve the employes of the necessity of doing political work to retain their jobs. But so long as there is no law to prohibit it some later board will be tempted to build up another machine.

*The promptness with which the Chamber of Com-*merce followed the advice given in the Sun-Telegraph that it demand a reduction in the city tax is gratifying. The suggestion that the Chamber and other civic bodies act was made in these columns Thursday, and yesterday the Chamber and also the Building Owners and Managers Association presented their demands.

The Building Owners call for a five-mill cut in the city tax rate. To make that possible it would be necessary to reduce the city's expenditures per annum from the present figure of approximately $29,000,000 to $24,000,000. That is a sharp cut, to be sure, yet it could be made without hopelessly crippling the public service.

Municipal expenditures ran about $20,000,000 a year during the five years immediately preceding Mayor Kline's first term. He ran it up to $29,000,000 by increasing expenditures for salaries and wages from $9,000,000 to $13,000,000, by awarding contracts to high bidders, by buying $1,950 rugs for his office and $75 gewgaws for his automobile with the taxpayers' money.

*The Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation pro-*poses to cut miners' wages 15 per cent and the United Mine Workers talk of calling the men out on strike. There was a time when that would have been a first-page news story. Now disorders and disputes have become so commonplace in the unfortunate coal industry that it attracts little attention.

One of the chief grievances of the miners in former controversies with the operators was that the latter did not give them full credit for the coal loaded. There was underweighing, it was charged, and the union always insisted on having its own checkweighman at the tipple to keep tab on the tonnage. There is a reminder of this grievance in the charge that retail buyers of coal in Pittsburgh are in some cases being given short weight.

Eternal vigilance on the part of the Bureau of Weights and Measures is required to protect the people from dishonesty. It is encouraging to find James P. Bailey, chief inspector of the bureau, alive to this situation. He reports that he has six undercover men at work on the coal complaint, and promises to give prompt attention to any evidence of cheating.

West View has under consideration a $75,000 bond issue to pay for a sewer system. The citizens are to hold a meeting to hear the matter discussed. They and the people of other boroughs and townships contemplating public improvements could choose no better time than the present. Interest rates on municipal bonds are low, labor and materials are exceptionally cheap, and many men need work.

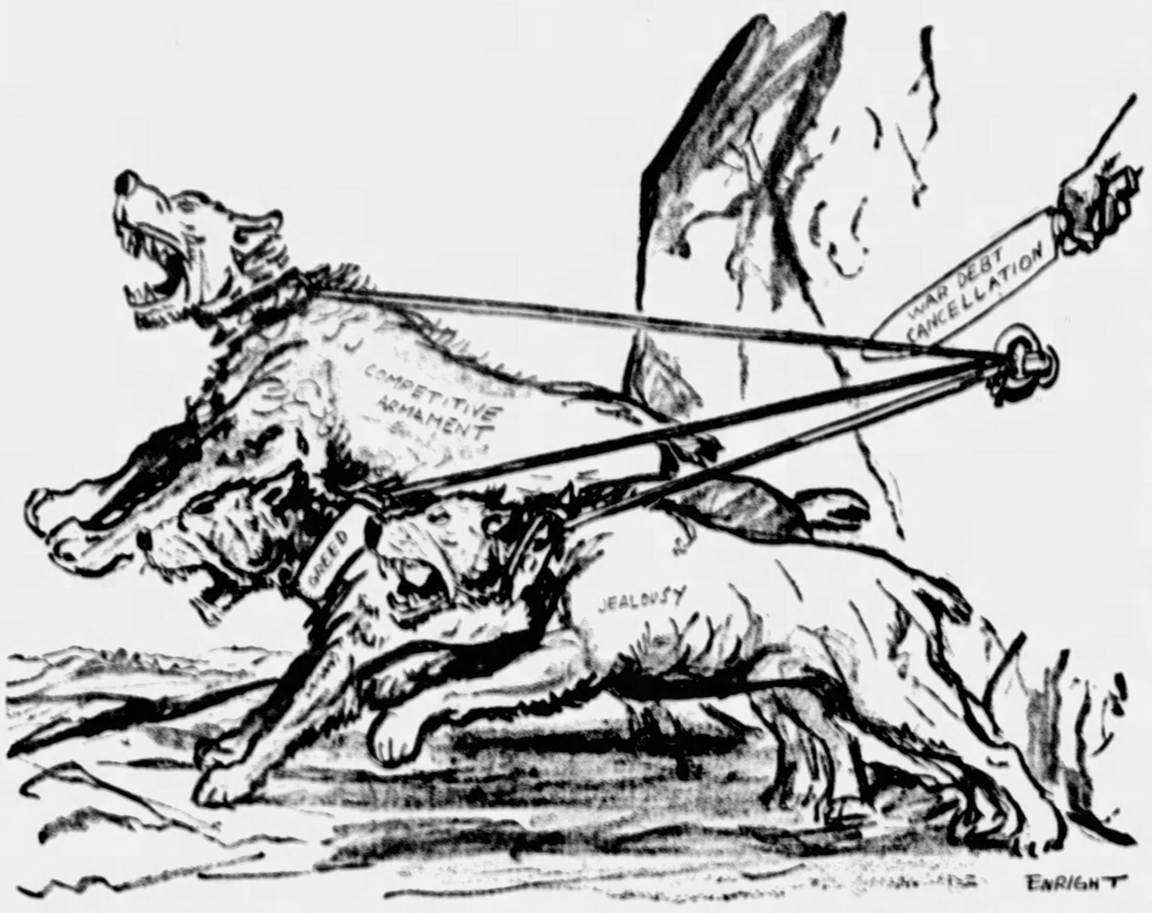
But, of course, extravagance is to be avoided in municipal improvements, and it is even more important that it be avoided now than in more prosperous times. The appropriation by the County Commissioners of $300,000 more for the airport brings the amount spent on the project to about double the original estimate. And there is no assurance that still more money will not be required. It is no wonder that extravagance is suspected by many of the voters.

There will be no extravagance in the purchase of tomorrow's issue of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. On the contrary it will be an economical expenditure, for the paper will be found crammed with far more than a dime's worth of news, pictures and important and entertaining articles. Some of the world's most distinguished and high-priced writers are among the contributors.

*The proximity of the Carnegie Institute's Inter-*national Exhibition of Paintings increases interest in art. The Gravure Section of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph will present in full color reproductions of several beautiful paintings. The prize winning pictures in the amateur photographic contest will also be found worthy of art lovers' attention.

Straining at the Leash

(Copyright, 1931.)



If and when European diplomats succeed in their plan to renounce their just debts to Uncle Sam and thus transfer the entire cost of the Great War to the over-burdened backs of AMERICAN TAXPAYERS, they will use the funds thus saved in strengthening their military and naval establishments.

Cancellation of the War Debts is the knife with which they would cut the leash that now restrains the European Dogs of War.

Real Americans will never approve the plans of the Cancellationists promulgated by the internationally minded Administration at Washington.

Debunking the Sacred Cows

By Claude G. Bowers

Prof. James Henry Rogers, of Yale, a political economist, who has spent some time in Europe studying conditions, has written a book on the present depression in which he traces the depression in part to the prohibitive tariff act which was forced through the Senate by the administration with a margin of two votes. He is convinced that the more intelligent of the industrialists now realize that tariff walls which shut them out from foreign markets are not to their advantage. He concludes that:

"Now that industries have become veritable giants high customs tariffs in this country and abroad are becoming ever more burdensome and annoying."

He finds that the world depression is due in a goodly measure to "our own unenlightened policies," and concludes that many of the giant industrialists "are avowedly ready to remove all such obstructions."

And he finds another reason for assuming that the industrialists are beginning to see a new light. The bankers and financiers, with tremendous loans in Europe, are not taking kindly to a policy which makes it impossible for their debtors to trade with us and make enough money to pay their debts.

He is unable, also, to look upon a policy as "the American system" which is driving American factories beyond our tariff walls where American money employs foreign workingmen, who spend the American money they get as wages with foreign businessmen.

* * *

Foreign Trade Loss Due to Grundy Bill

Industrials are losing their foreign trade because of the Grundy bill; bankers are trembling over their loans abroad because of the Grundy bill; and Dr. Rogers finds that the "American workingman," of whom we have heard so long, is now cured of the notion that the prohibitive tariffs operate for him. He says:

"While 7,000,000 of his (workingman's) number walk the streets and hitch-hike the highways in search of non-existent jobs, he is gradually learning that our high protective tariff, which from time immemorial has been pledged to keep his dinner pail full, not only is responsible for prolonging and aggravating the present unparalleled depression, but is likewise, at least indirectly, causing the migration of a highly important portion of American industry itself."

If the workingman has not learned as much he lacks the intelligence we think he has.

* * *

Americans Have Big Capacity for Bunk

The American people have had an almost unlimited capacity for bunk, if fed with a golden spoon by the few who benefit from the bunk and own the spoon. For years we heard of "infant industries" as an excuse for high tariffs; and when the steel, wool, aluminum and other industries, favored by the tariff, were swaggering giants. Then we began to hear of "the protection of American labor." It has always seemed strange to some of us that workingmen took this bunk from the golden spoon even when they knew that the "infant industries" were maintaining recruiting offices in the cheap labor markets of Europe to get cheap labor to displace the American workingman.

The tariff myth was as grotesque as the prosperity myth of 1928—but it was sacrosanct. It is still so much of a Sacred Cow that neither the United States Chamber of Commerce of the American Federation of Labor, in their reports on conditions, dared suggest a downward revision of the Grundy graft.

* * *

The Prosperity Myth in The Coolidge Regime

Another book has just been written by Dr. T. E. Gregory, professor of banking in the University of London, which deals with the prosperity myth of the latter part of the Coolidge regime. In an attempt to be encouraging to us in America he assures us that we have as much national wealth now as before the crash of the market and the tumbling of stocks. Or, to put it in another way, the real wealth of the United States was no greater when the stock market was soaring to the skies than now when the stocks are down. Our own business men and bankers, reassuring the public, are saying the same thing.

And yet in 1927 and 1928 when the stocks were absurdly, insanely high, we were told that this was evidence of the increase of wealth under the wise management of the statesmen of the party in power. The American people took that bunk served in the golden spoon in the campaign of 1928. When the opposition pointed to the condition of the farms, to the increasing unemployment even then, the people in power in Washington pointed to the price of stocks, the "increase in the nation's wealth" as an answer.

In New York City thousands of merchants who had always voted for Al Smith for Governor voted against him for President "to maintain prosperity."

* * *

The Time for Business Men to Speak Out

It is too bad that the United States Chamber of Commerce did not have the courage of its convictions or was too much moved by partisan considerations to recommend a downward revision of the tariff in its report. Julius Barnes once said, quite bluntly, that there had to be a downward revision maybe through the operations of the flexibility clause. This would take years.

Business men generally return from Europe with the same tale—the tariff must come down. Mr. Wiggin, of the Chase National Bank, has no doubt about it. Now, if these men think that the business interest of the country demands a downward revision now, they should say so bluntly, and to Mr. Hoover, who cannot see it at all. If business men continue to put their superannuated party theories above the interest of the country, it is just too bad for business.

* * *

Chamber of Commerce for Unemployment Insurance

But the report of the United States Chamber of Commerce has not a few pleasing features. It concludes that some form of unemployment insurance must be devised. And it makes it clear that the clamor against the anti-trust laws does not mean that business asks the wiping out of all laws against combinations in restraint of trade. So we are not going to make private monopoly a national policy after all. All we are asked to do, according to the report, is so to revamp the trust laws as to make it possible for industries to enter into agreements among themselves to prevent production far in excess of possible consumption. But even this is putting it in a worse light than the report of the chamber justifies. It agrees that the government may, on its own initiative, or on complaint, set these agreements aside if they are found to operate to the detriment of the public. There is some reassurance for those among us who still find private monopoly repugnant to have this clear exposition of intent from the chamber.

* * *

What Has Become of the Federal Trade Commission

Many will be puzzled at one of the things asked in the report. Nineteen years ago Woodrow Wilson said there should be a governmental authority to end vicious business practices and protect honest business and to inform business men planning an innovation what they could do under the law. When President, he created that authority, the Federal Trade Commission. Now comes the Chamber of Commerce asking for "some governmental agencies" to which business may apply in advance of a combination to determine its rights.

What has become of the Federal Trade Commission? Is it defunct?

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Mrs. Solomon Says—

My Daughter, in the pursuit of Man, I charge thee, watch thy STEP and bide thy time.

* * *

* * *

And a damsel that seeketh to ensnare a man's heart, when he is "safe and sane," and NOT in the "marrying mood," is as one that goeth fishing in January when the ice is impenetrable.

* * *

I charge thee, think not to entice any man into marriage when he is filled with contentment, when his digestion worketh happily, when his business prospereth and his friends are plentiful.

For then, he needeth no woman to help him PITY himself.

* * *

But when he is filled with bitterness, when he knoweth disappointment, when he feeleth "abused," when the world "treateth him rough"—then doth the Sympathetic Woman find a harvest ready for her reaping.

* * *

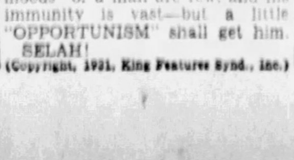
Seek to capture no man's heart. I adjure thee, when it is enwrapped in his work and absorbed in the passion of ambition.

* * *

For a man that laboreth joyously with all his heart, from dawn until dinner-time needeth no woman to help him AMUSE himself!

* * *

But when time hangeth heavily upon his hands, when his friends have begun to bore him, and his pastimes are as last year's love-affair, an old story; then doth the amusing woman get in her FINE WORK!



I bid thee, think not to tempt any man with the charms of domesticity when he is steeped in COMFORT and filled with well-being; when he hath a mother to coddle him, a sister to pet him and many willing slaves to wait upon him.

* * *

For then doth he require no woman to help him LOVE himself.

* * *

But when he is in a far land and lonely; when he is weak and ill and down and out and hath no fight left in him, then doth any woman that "mothereth" him find him easy.

* * *

Go to. Seek not to win any man's whole heart, when it is already divided amongst many women, and when damsels vie one with another to make his life one long sweet dream.

* * *

For then doth he not need any woman to help him ADMIRE himself.

* * *

But when he hath quarreled with his Beloved, when his vanity hath received a blow, when another woman hath cast him over—then hath any damsel but to put out her arms and "CATCH" him.

* * *

And all his philosophy, and all his determination, and all his struggling cannot save him FROM her!

* * *

Verily, verily, the "marrying moods" of a man are few, and his immunity is vast—but a little "OPPORTUNISM" shall get him. SELAH!

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—I suppose that once in the lives of every couple keeping house there comes a time when they suddenly discover there is not a pickle fork in the place. The shadow of such a tragedy fell across our household at exactly—when you hear the gong sound—8:11 last evening.

There were six invited guests for dinner. Also Verne Porter who just dropped in, completely gumming up the works. It was intended to be one of those informal evenings where old friends gather, dine pleasantly and afterward sit around and talk.

Piping hot soup had been served and following this a silver compartment dish holding jelly and pickles was passed. After a stevecore helping of jelly, Porter sneered: "I see you have no pickle fork!" I tried quickly to gloss over his faux pas with some inconsequential triviality.

But that seemed to inflame him. Holding aloft the dish, he repeated: "The McIntyres have no pickle fork." Trying to squelch the scandal I inquired: "Since when have you become such a passionate pickle forker?" Invited guests were shifting in their chairs. They knew the beast in me when aroused.

My wife began to talk excitedly hoping to turn conversation to some other topic and during the interim a well-trained servant slipped an ordinary fork besides Porter's plate. He picked it up, shoved it away and observed contemptuously: "Imagine forking a pickle with a thing like that!"

That was too much. Leaping to my feet ghastly pale and eyes fever bright I said with deadly calm: "It so happens, my friends, that in utter inexperience of outfitting a home, coupled with the depression, our simple little household is without a pickle fork but—" Then I began to cry.

In the meantime a dinner starting out so auspiciously was going haywire. Confused servants were bringing the wrong dishes and snatching others away too soon. To cap a climax I heard someone whisper: "Wouldn't it be terrible if they served asparagus without tongs?"

* * *

How we got through the dinner I'll never know. All the time Porter sat with his lips curled in derision, twisting his dirty mustache and tapping his fingertips on the table top. Several times I was tempted to thwart him and you'd be surprised how many villain's I've thwarted, man and boy, in my day. But after all he was at my festal board. So far I have never thwarted a guest in my house. All my thwarting has been away from home.

* * *

Well, sir, for a party that sprouted so many adenoids things grew better later. I showed my collection of autographed books, let them look through my album of signatures, did my imitation of Sitting Bull having tea with Peggy Joyce and later we had lemonade and cakes with Porter not missing a trick with the cakes either, you bet your life. Indeed, by 10:30 Walter Chalaire, Harry Silvey and I were off in a corner in a close huddle harmonizing "Sweet Adeline" and anybody who thinks I can't handle the tenor when it comes to "Your fair face beams" is nuts. Everybody stayed until midnight except Porter, who left when I told the cook to padlock the icebox. I never saw a party perk up so quickly. It shows what a smart host can do when he gets out on a limb.

* * *

After sprinkling the geraniums, putting out the cat and bedding the dogs, I joined my wife, finding her ominously quiet. "Well," I began cheerfully, "for a dinner party that died on the vine, I think I did a rather nifty job of rejuvenation." Silence. "I say for a party that"—and she interrupted with, "I heard you." Silence thickening into a deeper silence. And a burst of off key whistling from me to stimulate a touch of don't carishness.

* * *

To while away The Great Silence I started skimming through the market page for the latest sour news of my Peru bond—and no fallen lady could fall so low—when my wife cleared her throat as she always does before letting me have both barrels. You know, a sort of quick bur-burp. "It looks to me as though we have reached a station in life where we might afford at least the ordinary necessities." I caught the significance on the first bounce. It was the pickle fork propaganda. Still if it wasn't that it would be something or other.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

You're out of sorts tonight. Irritable and discouraged. The day has gone wrong. Why? You don't know why.

"Oh, I guess it's just luck," you say. "You never can tell how a day will turn out. Maybe I got out the wrong side of the bed—"

You try to laugh it off. But it won't be laughed off. You're thinking how often days go wrong. And, as you think, a wave of helplessness sweeps over you. Why does life have to be like this? Why can't you keep days from going wrong?

YOU CAN. BUT FIRST YOU MUST UNDERSTAND WHY DAYS GO WRONG.

Days don't go wrong because you "get out the wrong side of the bed." They don't go wrong by accident. There is a reason why your days go wrong . . . a definite, logical reason. And that reason runs through all your life . . . it explains ALL your wrong days . . . explains practically all your trouble and misery.

YOUR DAYS GO WRONG BECAUSE SOMETHING IN YOU HAS GONE WRONG.

It didn't go wrong in you this morning . . . nor last week . . . nor last year. It went wrong in you long ago—before you were six years old.

"Why I was only a baby then," you say. "I can't remember a thing about it. I could hardly think—"

You could hardly think but you could FEEL. You could feel as intensely then as you do now. You could feel fright and anger and hate. You could feel pride and humiliation, pleasure and resentment. You could want to fight. You could want to run away. You could want to pout, or cry about yourself.

There you were, a tiny child, facing life, feeling all these things about life. You didn't call it "life," of course. You did not think of it in any conscious terms. But you FELT it. Things were happening to you constantly . . . people were doing things to you or neglecting to do them . . . people were expecting certain things from you . . . people were punishing you or trying to please you. You had FEELINGS about all these experiences. AND FROM THOSE FEELINGS YOU BUILT UP A CERTAIN ATTITUDE TOWARD LIFE . . . YOU ACQUIRED A CERTAIN "PATTERN" OF BEHAVIOR.

You decided then whether you would fight life or run away from it . . . whether you would pout when things went wrong, or fly into a tantrum, or get sorry for yourself, or try to hide . . . or stand up straight and face the music. Many things helped to shape your decision. Your physical condition, your environment, your training, the example of your parents . . . all these things helped to shape your decision. But, by the time you were six, your decision was made.

YOU HAD DECIDED HOW YOU WOULD FACE LIFE . . . HOW YOU WOULD FEEL ABOUT LIFE AND YOURSELF, AND THAT DECISION HAS INFLUENCED EVERY ACT SINCE.

Why do days go wrong? That's why. Your own attitude toward life makes the day go wrong, or right. The day goes wrong because you take the day wrongly . . . because you want to fight the day or run away from the day or whine about the day. Back of every mishap lies that warped "behavior pattern" which you formed before you were six. BACK OF EVERY ANGRY, FRIGHTENED, HURT ADULT LIES THE PEEVISH, POUTY, COWARDLY, GREEDY OR SMARTY CHILD HE USED TO BE.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Time

A day of pain, a day of peace,
How can we reckon these;
A day of bondage or release,
By hour or centuries?

For one has known a year of bliss
That swept on wings along,
As fleeting as the breezes' kiss
Or echoed notes of song.

And one has lived a day of woe
And agony supreme
Whose lagging instants would not flow
Along time's stagnant stream.

How can we say of any man
His life was long or brief
Unless its hidden hours we scan,
Its happiness or grief?

ISN'T IT SO?

If a man is ignorant, he soon publishes the fact.

Before marriage he tells her he will never forget her, and after marriage he can't even remember her birthdays.

"Almost" never accomplished anything.

Few business practices are unethical except to those whose pockets are picked.

Every man should know his station in life. He who is carried beyond it may have to walk back.
